Big News for Many Power Men, Oil Men
And Little Men
Sullivan Met the Prince

By Arthur Brisbane

HERE IS SOME important news to millions of Americans, including those whose business is selling electric power to the public.

Development of the Diesel engine progresses rapidly. Engines will produce power, electric or other on a scale big or little, that will compete with, power companies, as automobiles and motor trucks now compete with railroads.

When England was in financial distress 100 years ago Macaulay asked what people would say "if we were to prophesy that in the year 1930, machines, constructed on principles yet undiscovered, will be in every house, that there will be no highways but railroads, no travelling but by steam," etc.

He little dreamed that the "machines in every house" would include telephones carrying the voice across the ocean, lights, washing machines, fans and cook stoves run by electricity.

And, forseeing an end of stage coach travel, he could not guess that railroads would come only to be dispossessed, in their turn, by travel through the air and by explosive gas engines in automobiles.

The Diesel engine threatens power companies, promises a solution of the air problem, and a new, better, cheaper automobile engine, with an electric ignition. It will give to the distant farmer and the little householder cheap electricity for light and power, with no payment for running power lines long distances.

Diesel engines, while waiting for something better to be invented, will take passengers through the air to Europe or across the continent for $25 each, or less. They may gladden the heart of the oil industry, creating such a market for oil as will make the present gasoline market seem trivial.

Long ago, when the thoughtless were putting glass on the roads to puncture the first automobile tires, they were urged by this writer to refrain, on the ground that, some day, cheaper automobiles, made by the million every year, would be used by men going to their work.

That writing was used as evidence, in court, to establish the value of Ford company stock as of 1913, for income tax purposes. This observer wishes to prophesy now improved engines will make human beings independent of power companies.

The Prince of Wales' entourage in South America is amazed to find Montevideo more interested in the Argentine prize fighter Suarez than in the prince and his brother. Huge crowds followed the fighter, only a few showed interest in the princes.

Nine Montevideo newspapers devoted ten pages to the fighter, only two and a half to British royalty. Only two newspapers put the princes on the front page, and two of them never mentioned the prince, one of the two giving three full pages to the fighter.

When the princes' grandfather, later King Edward, then Prince of Wales, met our John L. Sullivan in London at a boxing exhibition, this writer, present, observed no doubt in Sullivan's mind as to which was the great man.

"I hear you have been in America," said Sullivan to the prince. "If you ever come again, you want to ask for me."

When introduced to the Prince, Sullivan, extending a big hand, said affably "pleased to meet you, often heard of you."

That was his formality when meeting mayors of small American towns, devised to put them at ease. It was a great honor to have Sullivan say, "often heard of you."

Present was Jem Smith, heavyweight champion of England, in training to fight our Jake Kilrain. He was to give a boxing exhibition with old Alf Greenfield, and Sullivan to box with his partner, Jack Ashton.

"You've got your champion heavyweight here, in training. I'm just off the boat, and fat. Tell him to get in that ring with me, and if I don't knock him out in three rounds, I'll go back to America."

Jem Smith's manager, with no real money in sight, thought it would be a distressing spectacle for His Highness, and it probably would have been. The ring was only about 15 feet square.

GARRETT'S PLEA IS DENIED

Judge Bishop at the Garrett trial today denied motion of the defense to drop the indictment charging Oliver B. Garrett with accepting gratuities from John F. Sullivan. Atty. Callahan, in his closing argument, declared newspaper stories of the Garrett case were prejudicial to his client's interests. Arguments will end tomorrow morning and the case will reach the jury tomorrow afternoon. (Additional details of trial on Page 4.)

HUNDREDS FLEE IN SO. END FIRE

Girls Rush to Safety; Nearby Houses in Danger; Street Car Traffic Tied Up

Hundreds of factory employes, mostly girls and women, groped through smoke to safety today when fire threatened the block bounded by Washington, Waltham and Union Park sts., and Shawmut ave., South End.

Four alarms were sounded for the blaze, almost simultaneously with two alarms for another South End fire at Columbus ave. and Camden sq., and a fifth and last report for a fire in Wason ave. Police were asked to send other for a Dorchester fire-fighting unit.

The four-alarm fire started in the old Grover & Baker Sewing Machine building of years ago, now occupied by the Old Colony Furniture Co. and a number of other factories. The building was connected by an overhead passageway with the factories of the Schnirick Shoe Co. and the International Shoe Counter Co., on Waltham st.

ELY'S GAS TAX BILL PASSES

The vote was a voice one and there was not a murmur against the measure although a few Republican senators in debate had sharply opposed it.

The Senate then suspended the rules so that the bill could be sent back to the House immediately. It still has two tests to pass, namely, a two-thirds vote in both House and Senate, because it is a financial measure.

The bill calls for a one cent increase in the gasoline tax, from 2 to 3 cents, chiefly for the benefit of cities and towns. This increase came in for attack by Senator Charles C. Warren, Republican, Arlington, chief opposition speaker.

Senator Warren was rapped to order by President Caspar G. Bacon when he broke the rules by referring to the Governor and the Speaker of the House in his remarks. Later other Republican senators defended the measure as energetically as Warren had opposed it.

$555,000 Will of Mrs. Bryant Allowed

Judge William M. Prest in Suffolk Probate Court today allowed the will of Mrs. Alice Tait Bryant of 334 Beacon st., disposing of personal property to the amount of $555,000. Legacies of $10,000 were bequeathed to Mrs. Jacob Henry Ohlhoff of San Francisco and Mrs. Kenneth Brown of San Rafael, Cal. Addison S. Keeler of San Francisco, a nephew, received $5000. The remainder of the estate was divided between Mrs. Bryant's sons, Warren T. and Kendall S. Bryant.

Two Held in $1000 After Cafe Raid

Two men, arrested in a raid on the Roman Gardens Cafe, in Massachusetts ave., Saturday night, were held in bonds of $500 each today in federal court on liquor charges. They are Emilo Sorrocco of 7 Blue Hill ave., Dorchester, and Aldo Cavicchi of Yorktown st., Cambridge.

HE GOT MAD WHEN IT FELL ON HIS TOE

Then Took It to Dormitory Where It Was Found in Order to Smash It

Being a Harvard man and a cohort of the Crimson, James D. Evans saw red when the mail box dropped on his toe—so he took it over to Harvard and smashed it, special delivery, against the wall.

Evans, 32 years old and living in Pittsburgh, told this to Postoffice Inspector Thomas P. Crosin [illegible] Lewis and his fellow Harvard senior, Leonard F. Dean, 21, of Three Rivers, Mich., were held in $500 in federal court until April 15.

The angry students who took the mail box when it came loose from its moorings and fell on Evans' foot are charged with stealing it.

EASTER HERO IS STAKE FAVORITE

London, March 23—J. H. Whitney's Easter Hero was the favorite today in the call over of betting odds on the Grand National Steeplechase, to be run at Aintree Friday.

The American horse was at 100 to 9 against, with Sir Lindsay, his stable mate, and the British-owned steeplechaser Ballasport second choices at 100 to 7.

Other odds: Drinivre, 18 to 1; Drin, 18 to 1; Grakle, 18 to 1; Kakushin, 20 to 1; Shaun Goilin, last year's winner, 25 to 1.

The field was reduced to 47 today with the scratching of J. B. Snow's Delaire.

World-wide interest will be concentrated on the race, because of the Irish Hospitals sweepstake, which depends on the result. Some 3,000,000 tickets at $2.50 each have been sold in all parts of the world, especially the United States. Nearly 600 prizes, ranging from consolation prizes of about $6000 to the grand award of 374,000 pounds, about $1,850,000.

WIFE DIVORCES SABATINI

London, March 23 (AP)—Mrs Ruth Gosz Sabatini was granted a divorce decree today from her husband, Rafael Sabatini, widely known novelist and dramatist.

Sabatini did not defend the suit. The divorce was granted on grounds of misconduct.

It was alleged that the marriage was an unhappy one and that the couple had separated some time ago.

VIKING FLIER IS HURT IN CRASH

St. John's, N. F., March 23 (AP)—The rescue steamer Sagona, with 118 survivors of the sealer Viking, explosion on board, today forced its way through almost impenetrable ice floes off Horse Island on the return voyage to this port. Other vessels, with nine survivors on board, were likewise engaged.

While the ships with the survivors started out of the ice fields, the ocean going tug Foundation Franklin arrived here with the body of Patrick Bartlett, one of the disaster victims.

FOGG CRASHES IN PLANE

Bob Fogg, Concord, N. H., pilot, who flew north with a camera man in quest of pictures of the disaster, crashed on Horse Island, probably ending his flight.

Reports of the damage to his plane were meager, but it was reported that neither Fogg nor his companion was seriously injured. He had taken off earlier in the day from Hampden with a camera man.

Another picture airplane expedition, that of C. F. Kent, who was forced down at Pictou, N. S., while en route from Moncton, was continued today when he took off from that place at 8:55 a. m.

'FULLER IS BACK SEATER'—ELY

Former Governor Fuller was called a "back seat driver" today—and by none other than Governor Ely.

The characterization was made by the Governor during his daily conference with newspapermen, when he was asked if he wished to comment on Fuller's statement regarding Governor Ely's highway construction program.

"No," replied Governor Ely, "I guess I don't want to say anything. When you've got a back seat driver, you've got to keep your eyes on the road. You can't be looking over your shoulder."

Admiral Billard Here for Ring Bout

Rear-Admiral Frederick C. Billard, commandant of the Coast Guard, arrived in Boston today to attend the boxing bouts at Boston Garden tonight between army, navy and coast guard battlers. Admiral Billard visited Capt. William M. Munter, commander of the Eastern division of the coast guard, at the Customs House. He renewed old acquaintances and said his only reason for the Boston visit was to see the gloved battlers of the coast guard uphold the service in the squared arena.

Probation Given in Birth Control Case

Pleading guilty to sending non-mailable birth control matter through the mails, George H. Baldwin of Pearl pl., Natick, was given a suspended sentence of a year and a day in jail by Judge Lowell in federal court today. He was placed on probation for a year.

WOMAN KILLS HER HUSBAND WITH AXE TO SAVE 4

After 14 Years of Terror She Finds Him With Gun on a Lonely Vermont Farm

(By Special Correspondent)

Lyndonville, Vt., March 23—On a lonely mountain farm shortly before dawn today, Mrs. Edgar Simpson ended 14 years of drudgery and degradation and constant fear of her husband.

She killed him with an axe, after three children, whom she said he had threatened to shoot, slept peacefully in an adjoining room.

Oscar Fisher, 36, a farm hand, said he, too, was asleep.

The slain farmer, reported to have been wealthy, was 51. The woman who killed him, his second wife, is 14 years his junior.

LEAVES AXE BLOODY

A constable, a sheriff and finally a State attorney made an eight-mile trip from town into the mountains today to hear her story of the slaying.

She told it without emotion, matter-of-factly, rocking to and fro in a chair in the kitchen.

A short distance from her lay her husband's body. The skull was crushed by two blows of an axe. Beside it on the floor rested a loaded shotgun with which, she claims, Simpson set out in a fit of insanity this morning to wipe out his family.

On a hook behind the kitchen range, from which she snatched it to kill and to which she returned it after the killing—hung the axe. It had not been washed.

IN CONSTANT FEAR.

Fisher, the hired man, was questioned in another room, while she gave authorities the grim details.

She pictured her marriage to Simpson, nearly 15 years ago, and a subsequent life that amounted to virtual imprisonment, isolated from human companionship save that offered by her children and the hired hand, drudging along in a miserable existence, denied visits to town and to the "movies"—living always in the constant fear that her husband, subject to insanity

BROCKTON WIFE FINED FOR HORSEWHIPPING DIVORCEE

MRS. MORRILL IS ORDERED TO PAY $15

Admits Lashing Mrs. Andrews, Accusing Her of Alienating Husband's Affections

Brockton, March 23—Horsewhips are not legal as retrievers of veering love, Mrs. Catherine Morrill, 45, of Main st learned today in district court.

The comely wife, who horsewhipped Mrs. Mae Andrews, 38, an attractive divorcee, also of Main st, was fined $15 by Judge William C. Rowe and was given until Wednesday to pay the fine.

NO DEFENSE OFFERED

Mrs. Morrill was alleged to have stepped from a doorway and lashed the divorcee across the face, head, back, legs and hands, declaring to police later that Mrs. Andrews was alienating the affections of the horsewhipper's husband.

No defense was put on by Mrs. Morrill, the defense conceding guilt. The divorcee testified briefly and exhibited a welt across one hand.

Mrs. Elizabeth Phippe of Watson st, testified for Mrs. Morrill merely as a character witness, declaring that for eight years Mrs. Morrill and her husband, William Morrill, shared a house with Mrs. Phippe, who found her "a quiet and personable neighbor."

"TAKEN BY SURPRISE"

The horsewhipping victim told Judge Rowe that she was taken by surprise by Mrs. Morrill.

"I was walking along Main st.," said Mrs. Andrews, "when she suddenly stepped from a doorway and began lashing at me. I threw up my hands to ward off the blows and received many of the lashes across the backs of my hands.

"The only way I could get away from her was to run. I never went out with Mr. Morrill's husband. It is untrue that I broke up their home."

WALKER ASKED TO REPLY TO CHARGES

Roosevelt Mails Copy to Him, Asking for Such Answer as He Cares to Make

Albany, March 23 (INS)—Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt today called on Mayor James J. Walker of New York city to answer charges filed by the city affairs committee against him charging misfeasance in office.

The Governor, in a brief statement issued to the press this afternoon, announced he had mailed to Mayor Walker at Palm Springs, Cal., where he is vacationing, a copy of the charges.

"In accordance with the usual procedure in such matters, the Governor has mailed today to the mayor of New York city, at Palm Springs, Cal., a copy of the charges filed by the city affairs committee, dated March 17, 1931.

"The Governor has written that he would like to receive such answer as the mayor may desire to make as soon after his return to New York city as possible. The Governor understands that the mayor is planning to come in about 10 days."

Governor Roosevelt had no comment to make on the statement, remarking that it "speaks for itself."

Boxer Wounded

GUNMEN SHOOT CHELSEA BOXER

John DeAngelis, former boxer, failed today to throw any light on his assailant that shot him down last night in Chelsea, after the fighter was lured from his home at 11 Eutaw st., East Boston.

Chels.a police questioned him at Chelsea Memorial Hospital, where he is being treated for a shot through the thigh, one of seven bullets fired at him at Prospect and Marion sts., Chelsea.

DeAngelis told police he had left his home late last night in response to a phone call. He also related that he had received a series of anonymous notes in the past few weeks, but had ignored them. These notes all stated he would learn something advantageous if he went to Prospect and Madison sts., he stated.

He told police he drove to the spot last night and as he reached the corner a man darted across in front of him, causing him to stop. He said he got out of his car and as he did a man stepped out and opened fire upon him.

HEBERT FIGHTS LOBBY CHARGE

Providence, R. I., March 23 (AP)—United States Senator Felix Hebert, commenting upon a statement by Senator Barkley, Kentucky Democrat, regarding Hebert's alleged lobbying for insurance interests, said today:

"As I understand it, a lobbyist is a man who tries to secure passage of legislation for anyone who may hire him. I never have done that. I have had clients who at times needed legislation for their business and I have appeared in their behalf simply as counsel.

"I talked about this all through my campaign, and if the Democratic national committee refers to my speeches it will find more information than it already has.

"I suppose they will be presiding on the theory that a man who knows anything about a given subject should not be named on a senate committee to study that subject. Carried to its logical conclusion, that would bar from service on the bench any man who knows anything about law."

MAYOR AND SON START DIGGING ON TUNNEL

Crowd of 2000 Witnesses Ground-Breaking for $16,000,000 Project

Seven-year-old Francis Curley and his father, the mayor, shared honors at the ground-breaking for the $16,000,000 under-the-harbor traffic tunnel today on the East Boston side.

The project is now officially under way.

Mayor Curley outlined $35,000,000 in projects, including the tunnel, which will be completed in about three years, all of benefit to East Boston.

His son, however, was much more interested in the watch which was presented to him by East Boston residents and businessmen as a memento of the occasion.

HE KNOWS HIS TIME.

"It's just 25 minutes to 5," said Col. Thomas F. Sullivan, transit commission chairman, as the ground-breaking was about to begin.

And he repeated, square into the microphone: "Twenty-three minutes of 5; let's go!"

With a shovel half as large as those carried by his father and Col. Sullivan, the boy tarried over the first ground and cast the dirt aside.

A promise that Boston labor and materials will be used as much as possible was made by President Samuel Mason of the New York firm which has the contract for the tunnel.

The festivities, signalizing the biggest event in East Boston since the Airport was established there, were attended by 2000 persons.

LISTS HUGE PROJECTS

Mayor Curley, speaking from a platform decked with bunting and the city and national flags, listed the following assured projects:

Airport development, $7,500,000; Orient Heights boulevard, $1,300,000; highway to airport from tunnel, $1,250,000; state highway from Revere to the tunnel, $3,500,000; tunnel, $16,000,000; miscellaneous, more than $6,000,000.

"The total is approximately $35,000,000, which is within $5,000,000 of the total valuation of all the property in East Boston today," he said. "Here, also, will be situated the best airport only five minutes from downtown Boston.

"I say the best because Dr. Hugo Eckener and others predict huge hydroplanes crossing the ocean, planes that will require a mile straightaway to land, and when we get through at Governor's island we will have a waterway 2½ miles long beside the airport."

Rev. William B. Whalen, pastor of the church of the Most Holy Redeemer, said the invocation.

Mrs. Belmont Reads Shaw's "Love Letters"

New York, March 23—Disregarding the advice of George Bernard Shaw, famous playwright and philosopher, Mrs. August Belmont saved "love letters" he had written her and read some of them at a meeting of the Junior League. Those who expected to hear fervid protestations of love were disappointed as they related to negotiations for her to appear in a Shaw play when she was Elinor Glyn.

Mrs. Belmont

Shaw had once advised Mrs. Belmont to sell any "love letters" he might have written her, as they would bring a lot of money. Needless to say he was exercising his gift of satire when he referred to the communications as love letters.

There are 600 head of cattle and 150 head of sheep on the Biddeford farm. To tend them there were only her husband and herself, Fisher and the children, the oldest 14.

This morning, before breakfast, Fisher went out with Mrs. Morrill's husband. It is untrue that I broke up their home."

HIS THREAT TO KILL

She found him in the kitchen, loading the double-barrelled shotgun, she said, and he told her:

"I'm going to kill you first. Then I'm going to kill the children."

He raided the gun, she said, and advanced toward her. She flung herself on him, trying to wrest the weapon from his grasp—then reached behind the kitchen stove for the axe.

She struck him once and then again.

"I hit him with it twice," she said.

"I KILLED HIM"

He fell, the gun beside him. She replaced the axe, walked to the telephone and called Constable Archie Donahue.

That was 4 o'clock and it was full light.

"You better come out," she told the constable. "I killed my husband with an axe."

Then she dressed and took her seat in the rocker. Fisher came and found her there, rocking, near the body. Then the children, Mary, 14, her daughter by a previous marriage; Clyde, 12; Thelma, 9, and Martin, 5.

The children saw their father dead and she sent them from the room. The stock went unwatered and unfed.

Constable Donahue questioned both Mrs. Simpson and the hired hand. Fisher corroborated the woman's story that he was asleep and knew nothing of the killing.

BOTH ARE HELD

Donahue sent for Sheriff Frederick M. Flint and Flint in turn called State Atty. Oscar Shepard of Hardwick and St. Johnsbury.

The State attorney did not reach the scene until mid-afternoon. He ordered Mrs. Simpson held for questioning and Fisher in custody pending an investigation.

Plans were made to take the children into town for care pending the outcome of the case.

Thanks for Gift Cane Arrives 43 Years Late

Orange, N. J., March 23—Joseph Davis was never a man to took a gift horse in the mouth, so he has just learned, after 43 years who it was presented him with a cane as he was about to take a trip to Europe in 1888.

Davis, now 77, took the cane and forgot about it. He thought it came from members of the Temple Sharey Tfilo Synagogue.

Now that he has grown feeble, his physician advised him to use a cane. He remembered the present. He read the inscription.

MUSEUM'S ART CALLED FAKES

New York, March 23 (AP)—Dr. Stanislaus Toch, whose avocation is detecting fake masterpieces with the aid of photography, X-ray and chemistry, believes there are less than 30 genuine Rembrandts in the world.

Dr. Toch caused something of a stir in New York art circles Friday when asserting in a public lecture that at least possibly one of about 30 supposed Rembrandts in the Metropolitan Museum—a collection generally believed to be worth millions of dollars—are spurious.

Officials of the museum, who declined to discuss his statement, were informed of his findings some time ago, he said today.

"But obviously there is nothing they can say or do about it," he added. "The paintings were all given to them—they didn't buy them.

The Baichen party organized by Dr. Lewis Frissell, father of Varick Frissell, one of the Americans who were on the Viking, will search for Frissell, A. G. Penrod, another American, and 24 others who have not been found. Frissell and Penrod were motion picture men engaged in obtaining pictures of the sealing fleet's activities.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh A. Shaw McKean, of Boston, the latter a sister of Harry Sargent, explorer, the other American on the Viking, arrived here today. They came to greet Sargent, a survivor, when he reached port.

MAIL BOX THEFT CALLED JOKE

The alleged theft of the box had occurred at Cambridge and Garden sts., West End, just before midnight, and was witnessed by Patrolman Michael McCarthy who caught the registration number of the students' car and who collected a dozen letters on the sidewalk, where they had fallen from the box.

While the policeman was telephoning the station the box disappeared.

"It was all a joke," said Evans today to Postoffice Inspector Thomas P. Cronin. "Leonard Dean and I had been out riding and we both had been drinking."

"I had a letter that I wanted to mail, and when I saw the box I went over to it.

"I dropped the letter into the box and when I took hold of it the box was loose on its moorings. I gave it a pull and it fell off and came down and struck me on the toe.

GOT MAD AT MAIL BOX

"I got back into my car and Dean and I drove around for a while, and the longer I drove the sorer my toe began to get. Then I got mad at the mail box and I decided to go back and get it and break it.

"When we got back, the box was resting against a building and I got out of the car and picked it up.

"I didn't see any letters fall on the ground and I didn't take any of the mail. I guess the letter I mailed was among those forwarded by the policeman.

"Well, we drove over to Cambridge, and by the time I got over there I decided that I would break up the box. I took it into the college yard and threw it up against the college wall and it broke into several pieces.

"Then I picked it up and brought it over to Holworthy Hall and that is where the policeman found it. Mr. Dean was just along with me; he didn't do anything at all."

"Sunshine" O'Brien's Funeral Tomorrow

His former schoolmates at the John A. Andrew school, South Boston, will pay their last respects to Francis "Sunshine" O'Brien tomorrow when funeral services are held at St. Monica's Church, South Boston.

Pallbearers, whose names will be announced later, will be young boys with whom he was associated in the schoolroom. Francis O'Brien was known among the nurses and doctors at the City Hospital as "Sunshine" because of the constant smile he displayed despite five major operations, the last of which resulted in his death.

NORTON RAPS FUND SEEKERS

Charge that three professional money raisers are soliciting subscriptions from Boston business toward a $100,000 endowment fund for the Firemen's Band, was made today by City Councillor Clément Norton of Hyde Park.

Norton's charge was contained in an order introduced into the council meeting requesting the fire commissioner, Edward F. McLaughlin, to furnish the council with information relative to the "supposed contract" with the money raisers.

The Council continued with discussion of the classification of Suffolk County employes, a discussion that has been going on intermittently since December.

Grey Predicts Wheat Will Drop to 50 Cents

Washington, March 23 (INS)—Chester H. DREISER NOW CALLS LEWIS GOOD FELLOW

HIS PICTURE TO BE STRICKEN OUT ALSO.

Preparations Are Made for Alienists to Test Youth in Hammer Slaying

Haverhill, March 23—The high school senior class book will not contain the name or picture of Russell Noble, 17-year-old alleged hammer slayer of Mrs. Clara E. Ellis, who a few weeks ago was the outstanding pupil of the graduating class.

Principal Arlington I. Clow of the High School announced today that this ruling has been made simply because the boy will not graduate with the class.

Elimination of his picture and name is an ironical joke on the lad, for, according to his alleged confession to the police, it was to get money to make up a shortage in his collections for the class book and to pay for his photograph, that he went to Mrs. Ellis home on the night of the crime.

A new group picture of young Noble's boy and girl classmates will be taken for the book, because he was in the picture previously taken.

OUSTED AS PRESIDENT

Noble has also been succeeded as president of the Philomathian Society, composed of honor pupils of the three upper classes, by Benjamin Belkus of River st.

"Inasmuch as Russell Noble is not a member of the high school at present and, in all probability, will not be able to graduate, his picture would naturally not appear in the class book," said Principal Clow.

In his cell at the county jail at Lawrence, Russell expressed the hope several days ago that his picture would appear with the others and he was highly pleased when erroneously informed by his friends that it would. He has not yet been told of the change.

Examination of the accused boy by alienists will probably take place Wednesday at the county jail, Dist. Atty. Hugh A. Gregg said today.

WAITING FOR CONSENT

Gregg today was still awaiting a letter containing written consent of the boy's counsel, Atty. Richard J. McCormick, for the examination at this early date, but he expected it momentarily.

Upon receiving it he will go immediately before Judge Louis Cox of the Superior Court and present a petition for the appointment of alienists.

MAN HE SLAPPED GOOD FELLOW, SAYS DREISER

Declares He Likes Lewis, but Couldn't Sit and Swallow Insults

Kansas City, March 23 (AP)—Theodore Dreiser has turned from the role of "The Man Who Slapped Sinclair Lewis."

The author of "An American Tragedy," here last night, renounced any intentions of further combat with the red-headed Nobel prize winner and said Lewis was "really a good fellow."

Referring to his slapping of Lewis at a gathering of New York literati Thursday night, Dreiser said:

"I couldn't sit there and swallow his insults. I don't like being cursed and accused of plagiarism. I've answered that charge enough."

Asked if Lewis didn't turn the other cheek to receive the second blow, the novelist commented that, "If I remember rightly, it was the same cheek I slapped both times.

"But that affair is closed," he said. "Lewis has a reputation for being offensive. I like Lewis and I believe Lewis likes me.

"I admire some of his writings. Even 'Elmer Gantry' is a pretty good story, although it is a bit raw. 'Arrowsmith' is a good story, too. Paul De Kruif, who gave Lewis the material, first asked me to write the book, but I didn't have time."

BUTLER WARNS POLITICIANS

Berkeley, (Cal., March 23 (AP)—Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, indicated American politics today, asserting "we have achieved well-nigh a miracle of unrepresentative government."

Speaking before the University of California on its charter day, Dr. Butler said party organization and responsibility had disappeared.

"An interested, intelligent and informed electorate, which returns to the ideals of liberty of the country's fathers," is necessary, he warned, to prevent the political organization of the country from giving way to a new form, such as Fascism of Communism.

WENDEL RICHES TO CHARITY

New York March 23 (AP)—Sale of realty holdings approximating $100,000,000 is ordered in the will of Miss Ella Wendel, last of the famous old New York family. After certain specific bequests, the bulk of the estate is to be divided into 200 parts, which are to go in varying proportions to hospitals, church mission societies and other charities.

Coincident with the filing of the will, George Flint Warren, Jr., attorney for the executors, issued a statement noting "the more prominent gifts, other than those to the residuary legatees."

Five beneficiaries receive 25 shares each of the residuary estate. They are the Drew Theological Seminary, Madison, N. J.; St. Christopher's Home for Children, Dobbs Ferry, N. Y.; New York Society for the Relief of Ruptured and Crippled; Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, for the Nankin Theological Seminary at Nankin, China, and the New York Homeopathic Medical College and Flower Hospital, exclusively for the Flower Hospital.

Of the remaining 25 shares the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals gets one share, and Northfield schools, East Northfield, Mass., three shares.

Ingenious Robbers Arrested in Mexico

Mexico City, March 23 (AP)—Capital police today captured a band of thieves who robbed Banco Nacional de Mexico of approximately 50,000 pesos. They ingeniously substituted bags containing heavy washers for bags of pesos in trucks, which were transferring money within the city.

WIFE-BEATER TO GET LASHING

Baltimore, March 23 (AP)—The third man to be lashed for wife-beating in Maryland in 11 years, Joseph Kowalski, faced the whipping post here today.

The sentence, imposed last week by Judge O'Dunne after he had heard testimony that the man had beaten his wife while she was ill, and had been guilty of other acts of cruelty, was scheduled to be carried out this afternoon in the City Jail.

Judge O'Dunne, in a letter to Sheriff Joseph C. Deegan recommended that the lashing be carried out "without brutality" and that all newspaper photographers be barred. Reporters were given permission to be present.

2 WOMEN FLIERS DIE IN CRASHES

Los Angeles, March 23 (AP)—Two women pilots and two men accompanying them were killed in suburban airplane crashes yesterday.

Miss Aileen Miller, 22, transport pilot, and Ivan De Villiers, aerial advertising promoter, crashed in a monoplane she was piloting from Grand Central air terminal, Glendale.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Wadleigh, both of whom held private pilot licenses and who rented an open biplane to take photographs, fell a few moments after taking off at Burbank.

At the airport it was said Mrs. Wadleigh was to take the controls shortly after the take-off.

Adams Back in Capital

Washington, March 23 (AP)—Secretary Adams returned to Washington today after an absence of 17 days, most of which was spent watching the fleet maneuvers in Panama waters. He landed at Miami, Fla., yesterday from the cruiser Chester and came to the capital by train.

THIRD MDVANI TO WED HERE

Newport, R. I., March 23—Prince Alexis Mdvani, of the Paris Mdivanis, has followed the example of his two brothers in making an American beauty the target of his affection.

Prince Alexis, it has been formally announced, will be wed to Miss Louise Astor Van Alen of Newport and New York, on the afternoon of May 15 in the palatial Van Alen summer place at Orchre Point.

DESCENDANT OF ASTOR

The announcement of the wedding date was made by the bride-to-be's mother, Mrs. James Laurens Van Alen. Rev. Stanley C. Hughes, rector of Trinity Church, Newport, will officiate and only immediate friends of the family will be present.

Miss Van Alen, who made her debut last year, is a direct descendant of John Jacob Astor and is great-granddaughter of William Astor. She is a granddaughter of the late James J. Van Alen, ambassador to Italy during the administration of President Cleveland.

SERGE IN QUANDARY

Prince Alexis' brother Serge is at present making plans to become the husband of Mary McCormic, noted diva, as soon as Pola Negri accepts the divorce she sought in Paris. Serge is at present in Hollywood, visiting at the home of a third brother, Prince David, the husband of Mae Murray, of stage and screen fame.

Prince Serge is in somewhat of a quandary, as Pola Negri has indicated that she may not accept the Paris divorce and that she may withdraw her suit. In that event, Serge would have to sue her for his freedom in California before the wedding bells could ring for Mary and him.

Court Withholds Divorce Decision

Worcester, March 23 — Judge Chamberlain in probate court today reserved decision on the plea of George A. Bourgeois, Atlantic City lawyer, that Massachusetts courts have no jurisdiction to hear the suit for separate support brought against him by his wife, Mrs. Muriel Bourgeois, of Northboro.

Counsel for Bourgeois declared the suit had not been entered in court at the time papers were served on him in Northboro on February 21.

PRINCE ALEXIS MDVANI AND MISS VAN ALEN

MAE MURRAY MARRIED PRINCE DAVID MDVANI

POLA NEGRI TOOK PRINCE SERGE MDVANI

MARY McCORMIC AWAITS PRINCE SERGE

WEDDING BELLS FOR THEM SOON

On May 15, Prince Alexis Z. Mdvani will take as his bride, Louise Astor Van Alen, of New York and Newport, at her parents' summer home at Ochre Point. Alexis is the third of his brothers to invade America on a romantic quest.

MAE MAKES CHARMING PRINCESS

Prince David Mdvani chose Mae Murray, of stage and screen note, as his bride. They are now living happily in Hollywood and at present are helping to entertain Prince Serge Mdvani, who is planning another matrimonial venture with Mary McCormic. The three brothers give their home address as Paris, but their hearts, it seems, belong in America.

IN HAPPIER DAYS

Here's Prince Serge and Pola Negri before their marriage hit the rocks and was brought into the Paris divorce court. At present Pola seems to be undecided as to whether she will accept the divorce for which she sued.

IT'S REAL LOVE—SHE ADMITS IT

Mary McCormic, noted opera singer, is only waiting for Pola to make up her mind before she becomes the bride of Prince Serge. She is now in California, and 'tis rumored that if Serge's first wife doesn't accept her Paris decree, action for a divorce will be started in California. The couple are determined to wed as soon as possible.

MLLE. TOLSTOY TO GO TO CANADA

Tokyo, Japan, March 23 (By the Canadian Press)—Mlle. Alexandra Tolstoy, daughter of the Russian novelist Count Leo Tolstoy, who repeatedly has sought permission from the Canadian government to enter the Dominion, says now that she has been ordered by the Soviet government to return to Russia.

"Though I have received a peremptory order from the Soviet government to go back to Russia, I have no intention of doing so," she commented. "The Soviet government is oppressing primary school education of the Yasyana Plyana system, so cherished by my father and is permitting terrorism against religion. I have accepted an invitation from the Doukhobors in Canada, and I hope to spend the rest of my life in Canada."

Mlle. Tolstoy has not yet received from the Canadian government a permit to enter the Dominion.

FINAL WITNESS IN GARRETT CASE HEARD

Taking of evidence in the trial of Oliver B. Garrett, his wife, and Miss Lillian V. Hatch, charged with conspiracy to extort, ended today at the opening of the third week, and final arguments began.

After defense counsel had presented several motions to be heard later, Atty. Herbert F. Callahan started summing up for the former liquor raider.

John F. Sullivan, former proprietor of Hotel Rita, relieved victim of the extortion conspiracy, had previously testified he paid money to Miss Hatch for Garrett's at the Vendome stand.

Under cross examination Dineen said the nearest company stand was at Boylston and Dartmouth sts., two blocks away.

NO THUNDERSTORM.

Previous to Dineen's appearance on the stand, a weather report, showing there were no thunder storms in Boston from May 28 to June 15, 1930, was introduced to refute testimony of William H. McShane, newspaperman.

McShane had testified that while a thunder storm was coming up Sullivan told him during a conversation on Commonwealth ave. he never gave Garrett a cent and hoped the lightning would strike him dead.

The witness did not change his statement.

"That report is no doubt correct," he said, "but I will reiterate with all the same fervor that there was a thunder storm. I couldn't be mistaken in that."

McShane followed to the witness stand William F. Hingston, defense handwriting expert, who testified in his opinion writing on deposit slips on the National Rockland bank and Brookline Trust Co. were not Garrett's.

OTHER WITNESSES.

Other defence witnesses were Jeremiah P. Sheehan and Daniel J. Welby, former members of the Garrett liquor squad. Testimony of John R. Tobin, also a former member, as given at the previous trial, was read. Tobin is suffering from a broken leg.

Garrett himself resumed the stand at the opening of court and admitted he banked $807 in a period when his pay was less than $500.

JURY PICKED IN LINGLE CASE

Chicago, March 23 (AP)—A jury to try Leo Brothers for the murder of Alfred ("Jake") Lingle, Tribune police reporter, was completed today and sworn in.

The jury was taken out while attorneys wrangled over points of law. No session was to be held this afternoon and the opening arguments were set for tomorrow.

As the last veniremen were questioned, the prosecution indicated that the question of "Why was Jake Lingle killed?" might go unanswered.

"The Supreme Court of this State has ruled," said Asst. State's Attp. Wayland Brooks, "that the State is not obliged to prove why a man was murdered."

Judge Donnelly in Debut on Bench

Judge James C. Donnelly, recently appointed by Governor Ely to the bench of the superior court, today assumed his new duties in a courtroom banked with floral tributes from friends and associate justices.

Judge Donnelly's initial case was a personal injury suit brought by Luigi C. Butera against William M. Walsh as a result of an automobile accident. Butera was awarded $500. Tonight the new jurist will be banqueted in Worcester by a group of Dartmouth classmates.

O. O. McIntyre Carries the Mail

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

While Kid Dreiser was walloping Sinclair Battling Lewis the Kaiser's son lost a decision in Germany.

The last of the Hapkawardburgs ran into the police and was kicked for a round trip around an important building.

Like Dreiser and Lewis that was not an important war. You couldn't borrow money on it.

August Wilhelm just grappled with the coppers and finished number two. Way back in Holland the original Wilhelm had nothing to say about August Wilhelm.

Lewis made no attempt to retain Theodore's lobs as Dreiser won all six sets on his service alone.

We are sorry that Sinclair and Theodore fought at Ray Long's dinner. It's one social Dennybrook Fair they can't blame on Polly Gann.

After the slugging started they say O. O. McIntyre decided to carry the mail. That's right. When fights start we join the Pony Express.

A. F. OF L. OPENS WAR ON DRY LAW

By ARTHUR HACHTEN

Washington, March 23 (US)—While organized labor today made public announcement of the formation of a gigantic group to fight for modification of Volsteadism, Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, dry leader, issued demands that both major political parties declare themselves unequivocally on the prohibition issue.

Adoption of a constitution and formation of a national advisory committee of 80 trade union officials representing 75 national and international unions was announced by labor's national committee for modification of the Volstead act.

Matthew Woll, vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, is president of the modification committee and I. Ornburn, president of the Cigarmakers' International Union, is secretary.

The A. F. of L., at its recent meeting in Miami, Fla., authorized formation of the anti-prohibition committee. It was the first organized effort of labor unions to smash prohibition.

HERO OF 'FRONT PAGE' IS DEAD

Chicago, March 23 (AP)—Hilding Johnson, for 20 years criminal courts reporter for the Herald and Examiner and the newspaperman whose personality furnished the basis for "The Front Page," died today.

He had been ill a week with hemorrhages of the stomach, but refused to leave his "beat." He had promised his physician that he would "drop in at a hospital" today. He became critically ill last night and never recovered.

Johnson was 40 years of age and one of the most picturesque characters in the profession. He was described as "knowing everybody worth knowing" in the political and criminal world of Chicago.

Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, writing "The Front Page," quite frankly used Johnson as their protagonist. And Johnson himself always referred to it as "that play those guys wrote about me."

Fatal Paralysis Leads to Poison Injected by Tiny Tick

Washington, March 23 (AP)—A venomous and tiny tick is being studied by the public health service as the cause of a fatal paralysis for which there is a simple cure.

The malady primarily affects animals, although humans can become victims of the insect, which labors under a handicap of "dermacentor andersoni." It is caused only by the female ticks, which sucks from the blood stream continuously for 10 or 15 days, injecting a potent poison investigators have been unable to isolate and analyze.

MADRID POLICE QUELL RIOT

Alderman Garcia Cortes, formerly a Socialist and now a Liberal, opposed a measure calling for an increase of pay for municipal employes and City Hall employes stormed into the chamber shouting for more money and "Down with Garcia Cortes."

On the outside, street cleaners and other employes packed the plaza, and when Alderman Cortes left the City Hall the crowd attacked him. Police dispersed the mob without injury or arrest.

CROWDS CHEER HOOVER IN SAN JUAN

San Juan, Porto Rico, March 23 (AP)—Throngs of people welcomed President Hoover here at 12:30 this afternoon.

Ovations greeted the President all along the route from Ponce, where he landed, to San Juan. He rode with Governor Roosevelt in a touring car, the top of which was let down, and paused briefly in each village.

A sobbing mother struggled to reach the President in the town of Cayey bearing a petition for commutation of an 11-year sentence her son is serving at Joliet (Ill.) prison. Secret service men took the document and it will be referred to the Department of Justice. Speaking Spanish excitedly, the woman was escorted away by friends.

Replying to the address of welcome of the mayor of Ponce, the President said:

"This visit gives me an opportunity to learn your problems and to view your progress. As governor is the son of the American President who began the work of helping Porto Rico.

"I hope my visit will mean closer co-operation between Porto Rico and the mainland."

Fog Kills One; Big Ships in Peril

Berlin, March 23 (AP)—A sudden fog which enveloped a large area of Northern Germany last night continued to shroud the North sea coast today. One person was killed and four injured in vehicular collisions here. The liner Bremen, bound from Bremen to Hamburg, to dock for overhauling, was obliged to cast anchor twice off Cuxhaven, owing to invisibility. Several collisions were reported in the Elbe estuary.

Man About Town

—By AL DUFFY—

Women Have Been Kind

I know now why a girl is called a doll,
For you were like a reed swayed in the wind,
Unstable as a leaf blown on a gale—
And Tellegen says — "Women have been kind."

You said we'd love for better or worse,
And leave all our inconstancies behind;
I laugh—because you are not worth a curse—
And Tellegen says — "Women have been kind."

You're kind enough—the kind I won't forget—
Oh, you are sweet and fair and so refined,
But how I wish that you and he had met—
For Tellegen says, "Women have been kind."

The management of the Park Central Hotel in New York—the scene of the famous Rothstein murder in flirting with Mickey Alpert to bring his band to their hostelry, Mickey finished up at the Cocoanut Grove Saturday night and left for New York Sunday to discuss the offer. It will probably be the middle of the week before any decision is made on the matter and, in the meanwhile, his band will stay on at the Grove until Charlie Solomon, the new owner, decides what he is going to do with his new property. In any event, it's a pretty safe bet that he'll close the Hollywood Inn and concentrate his attention on the Grove.

"Don't Bet on Horses"

One of the Pulitzer vessels who survived the end of the World was George Daley. The World-Telegram took George in out of the cold and wrapped a blanket—an eminently fitting horse-blanket—around his shivering shoulders. George used to represent the Pulitzers at the track, and on occasion even advised H. Bayard Swope concerning which horse might be expected to romp in with the money. But—in order to take in George someone had to be nudged away from the fire—and that someone was Roger (ex-Bostonpost) Birtwell of the World-Telegram sports staff. He is now on the sports copy desk of the Times. It shows, if nothing else, where some of Pulitzer's profits went, for there were days when George failed to pick the right rabbit—got it?

Sights and Sounds

It's not the fault of several prominent pols that there wasn't a big wad of the State's money in the Industrial Bank when it folded . . . The son of what prominent Brookline minister spent the night in jail recently after a gay party in one of the doggy "family hotels" that wild town? . . . Warden James Hogsett of State prison is one of the kindliest men to hold that job. To date he has recommended parole for practically every lifer in the gaol . . . Medical Examiner Timothy Leary has a library of more than 250 books on the subject of fermentation and he can trace the process back to the ancient Egyptians . . . Philip Allen pres. of Bird & Sons (linoleum-makers), is happiest when he can find someone who will sit down and play 'cello duets with him . . . Edsel Wiggleworth, Big Shot at the Museum of Natural History, raises chickens on his Tewksbury farm. He prizes the fowl so highly that you must wipe your feet in a box of sterilized sand before you can visit them in their coops . . . Bibber McCoy, the wrestler, is the only person we know who is listed in the telephone book under his nickname . . . Where is "Bunty" Carr these days? Block Island, I suppose . . . What a party John Macomber is planning for the housewarming of his rebuilt racing stables, Rockland! . . . Atty. Joseph Santoianno, who once polled more than 700,000 votes as the Democratic nominee for Sec. of State, practiced medicine 20 years—and he wore a beard! . . . BEACH COTTAGE PREY OF FIRE

Gloucester, March 23—Trapped on the second floor of his summer cottage when fire broke out early today, John Gillis of 210 Eastern ave., with difficulty fought his way to the street in his night clothing.

Racing 200 yards to the nearest fire alarm box he sounded an alarm. The cottage is located at Brier Neck, Long Beach, directly opposite the Harbor Beach Hotel.

Owing to a strong wind that was blowing off the harbor the firemen were given a stiff fight. The Gillis cottage was practically a total loss. Damage is estimated at $2500.

200,000,000 BU. OF U. S. WHEAT IS ROTTING

Washington, March 23 (AP)—A renewed demand for the equalization fee plan for disposing of agricultural surpluses was voiced by Republican Leader Watson of the Senate in the wake of the Farm Board's announcement that it would purchase none of the 1931 wheat crop.

Watson said he did not know what would be done with the more than 200,000,000 bushels of wheat accumulated by farm board agencies, but said he had been informed that one-third of its already had deteriorated to such an extent it could only be used for cattle feed.

Senator Couzens, Republican, Michigan, said the "equalization fee, debenture or any other artificial method would not solve the surplus question."

The situation would never right itself, he thought, until the farmer is able to sell more directly and to spread out his crop sales over a long period, instead of dumping all his wheat on the market after harvest.

U. S. AUTOS KILL 32,500 IN YEAR

New York, March 23 (AP)—There were more than 835,000 automobile accidents in the United States last year, and they killed 32,500 persons and injured 962,000, the Travelers Insurance Company reported today.

Deaths increased 4.5 per cent over 1929. New York State went contrary to the general tendency, reporting 3074 fatalities, a decrease of 3.1 per cent.

Germany and Austria want to arrange some sort of commercial agreement, profitable to both countries.

That might interfere with Briand's plan for a "United States of Europe."

It might also lead to political union between Germany and Austria. There will be no United States of Europe. But, if France says no, it will mean no, because France has the flying machines, and what they say is the law.

Metalized Milk Proves Boon to Sufferers From Anemia

Emory University, Ga., March 23 (AP)—Increasing hope for sufferers from anemia is being provided here through experiments with "metalized milk."

Dr. J. L. McGhee, head of the department of bio-chemistry, avoids using the word "cure" in his report on the progress of the "metalized milk" treatment, but he says that virtually all anemia victims have shown striking improvement after drinking the fluid.

In one experiment, conducted in a Georgia cotton mill, 138 out of 140 workers showed a big increase in the percentage of hemoglobin, the coloring matter of the red corpuscles, from the treatment.

CANCER CURE IS SEEN IN SERUM

New York, March 23 (AP)—Cancer tissue growing artificially in glass dishes is killed in a few minutes by a new serum developed in the cancer research laboratory of London Hospital, England.

Unlike other tumor remedies this serum is harmless to living tissues except cancer.

These discoveries and their possibilities for experimenting with cancer in man are told in the April issue of the American Journal of Cancer by Thomas Lumsden, M. D., director of the London laboratory.

Try Variety in Vegetable Dishes

We all seem to be growing "vegetable conscious" these days, backed up by the advice of doctors and dietitians who continually try to impress on us the importance of vegetables in a balanced diet.

But it's not always easy to prepare vegetables attractively enough to tempt the man of the house whose idea of a perfect meal is usually steak, baked potatoes, hot bread and a piece of pie.

Baked beets are more flavorful than boiled beets (baking them in the skins and adding butter, salt and pepper at the table). Parsnips may be mashed as you would turnips and are delicious. And celery may be cut in two-inch lengths and fried in deep fat.

MACEDOINE OF VEGETABLES

Wash and scrape carrots and cut in strips an inch long and one-third of an inch thick. There should be two cups. Wash and pare white turnips and cut in half-inch cubes. Have two cups. Wash and pare potatoes. Shape with a circular cutter, something like an apple corer, and cut in half-inch lengths. Boil carrots and turnips until tender. Boil potatoes 3 minutes; drain and plunge into ice water; drain again and dry between towels. Then fry in deep fat until well browned.

Using bag and tube, pipe a border of mashed sweet potato, well seasoned, around the platter. Next to this a border of carrots and turnips combined with 1 cup of sauce. In the center pile the fried potatoes. Sprinkle the mixed border with finely chopped parsley.

Sauce

Melt 3 tbsps. butter, add 3 tbsps. flour, 1 c. milk, ½ tsp. Vegex, ½ tsp. lemon juice, and salt and pepper to taste.

ONION SOUFFLE

Cook an onion in salted water and drain well, then chop and drain well, very well, 10 or more silver-skin onions, according to size. Press through a sieve; there should be 1 c. of puree, not at all watery. Add 1 tbsp. butter and season with salt and pepper. Make a sauce of 1 tbsp. each of butter and flour, 1 c. rich milk, ¼ c. soft, sifted bread crumbs, and 1 egg yolk. Add this sauce to the puree of onion and fold in the stiffly beaten whites of 3 eggs. Turn into buttered baking dish, set into a pan of hot water, cover with buttered paper, and bake until firm to the touch. This will take about ½ hour.

STRING BEANS EN SURPRISE

Drain a can of small, stringless beans and place on a clean cloth to absorb all moisture. When well dried, put half of them into an au gratin dish, season highly with salt and cayenne, cover with ¼ c. grated cheese and pour over 2 tbsps. of heavy cream. Repeat and put into oven to brown. Parmesan cheese, grated and mixed with a little melted butter, then spread in flakes over the top, makes a more attractive looking dish than plain factory cheese. Both taste good, however, and it might not be convenient to use Parmesan.

Faithfully yours,

Martha Lee

Sleep Goes With Drink

Graduates and guests of the Martha Lee Cooking School were interested in the samples of Ovaltine, the well-known beverage, which were presented to every visitor through the courtesy of the Wander Company, of Chicago. Ovaltine, which was first popularized by its efficiency in bringing restful sleep to those troubled with insomnia, is now equally appreciated as a food builder, especially for athletes, children and convalescents.

This general body builder provides nourishment for the formation of muscular tissues, nerve tissue, brain tissues, bones and blood and it is especially interesting to know that physicians recommend the inclusion on reducing diets which often lack the necessary elements of nutrition. Ovaltine is a body builder and an energy provider but not a fat producer. Praise be!

A REAL TREAT FOR ALL

Sandwiches for Spring Are Demonstrated

Right in step with the Lenten season came the lecture and demonstration last week by Mrs. H. S. MacBride, well known dietitian for the Continental Baking Company, at the Martha Lee School of Practical Cookery.

Mrs. MacBride's second demonstration was welcomed by the members of Martha Lee's cooking classes and her new sandwiches and sandwich loaves were a fascinating innovation to them.

Mrs. MacBride's demonstration included a Wonder Garden Loaf, a special Lenten sandwich, the Sea Shore Special, the Wonder Banana Sandwich, Toasted Cheese Dreams, the Continental Baking Company's, at the Martha Lee School of Practical Cookery.

Mrs. MacBride's second demonstration was welcomed by the members of Martha Lee's cooking classes and her new sandwiches and sandwich loaves were a fascinating innovation to them.

Mrs. MacBride's demonstration, however, deserves special mention for its delicious filling as well as for its attractive appearance. Concealed beneath the parsley foliage on top and the asparagus fence around the edges repose luscious sliced tomatoes, thin slices of green pepper stuffed with cream cheese, shredded celery and beets, and a dash of pineapple for luck.

Everyone declared the lesson to be a great success and we fear that some of the husbands of wives belonging to the Wednesday afternoon class waited over-long for their dinners as the ladies lingered to question Mrs. MacBride about the art in the sandwich world.

Addresses School

Hood Farm on Screen

So did the Hood's ice cream which was served together with Moxie, Pureoxia Ginger Ale and Sunshine English-Style Cookies for refreshments.

Mr. Klofkorn addressed the graduates and agreed to come down in the near future to give a special and personal demonstration on Potato Pancakes by recipe used in his family for many years. We will have the bowl and spoon waiting!

Codfish Good for Quick Meals

Where is the stout New Englander who can resist the salty tang of codfish? Whether you are New England born and bred, or an adopted member of the "Yankee" family, you will find yourself relishing codfish cakes, codfish creamed toast, codfish au gratin and dozens of other delectable delicacies made of shredded codfish.

Our favorite and oft used brand at the Martha Lee School of Practical Cookery (remember the carton with the red band?) makes the most delicious cakes for Sunday morning's breakfast, served up with what remains of Saturday's beans and steaming, golden coffee. There is enough shredded codfish in one box to serve six or seven people, if mixed with the proper proportion of fluff, potato and a bit of seasoning and perhaps an egg to bind it all together. The resulting rich brown cake, with crusty, tempting jacket, would stir the most indifferent Sunday morning appetite to new interest in life.

For speedy meals, this same delicious codfish comes already blended with fine potatoes and seasonings, all ready to form and fry in the pan or in deep fat. One can of this prepared codfish cake will serve three people amply.

Tea for Two for Grads

A Tetley tea bag was furnished, through the courtesy of the Tetley Tea Company, to visitors and graduates of the Martha Lee Cooking School and we know that everyone enjoyed the delicious flavor of this beverage, especially if they made the tea by the recipe suggested by the Tetley Tea Company. Here 'tis:

First, rinse out the teapot with boiling water. Second, put one teaspoon of tea in the pot for each cup of tea. Third, pour fresh boiled, bubbling water on the tea leaves. Fourth, steep for five or six minutes and serve promptly. Always serve with milk or cream. One pound of my favorite orange pekoe tea makes 300 cups, making the cost per cup really less than a third of a cent.

Sugar Is Big Help to Figure

"No more thin gals for us!" chorus the boy friends and husbands, and over night obliging damsels alter their food habits, always aiming to please.

Don't be afraid to eat sweets. Like anything else, they're not so good for you if over-indulged, but taken in sensible moderation they form a balanced dietary and store up reserve energy to take care of those days when resistance seems low and you need all the energy you have at your command.

Prizes of Moxie Awarded at School Exercises

Three Families Flee $8000 Roxbury Blaze

Three families were driven out today when fire swept the six-family house at 110 Winthrop st., Roxbury, today, causing damage of $8000. The blaze started in the kitchen of David Goldstein on the third floor, according to firemen, and worked its way through the walls to the roof. The family of Walter Kelleher on the second floor and Walter Lawler on the first floor were forced to flee. Their apartments were damaged by water.

A Good Shop

—to know about is Parker Bros., where you can get new clothes and linens, ready made or made to order; or have old ones repaired or remodeled at minimum prices. Personally I find it mighty convenient, whether I need a button sewed on, a new suit made, or a coat, suit or dress re-sponged in a la 1931! Cleansing and pressing (with insurance) costs only $1, for 3-pc. suits, refitted or pleated garments, or cloth coats. Good work, too, I speak from experience. Ask about their new "Pearl" frocks at $6.95 and $7.95—grand values! And notice the new white fox skins—two of the handsomest I've ever seen—at $59 less than last year's price. Parker Bros., 119 Tremont St. Shop 309. Dev. 2342.

And Evelyn

has a new collection of treasures that look like the wings of happiness complete! She is going to let us have them for $4.95, $5.95, and $12.95! There is no need to look "like everybody else" this Easter for the new fashions at Evelyn's are infinitely varied and infinitely lovely! Evelyn has a charming softness of line—nothing is hard, nothing is difficult to wear. Charming silk crepe jacket frocks —Young little three-piece suits (skirt, jacket and beret). Other suits tailored in those new spongy woolens with adorable blouses. Redingotes are fresh as Spring itself! Polka dots, plaids, stripes and gay prints. I want you to see the truly distinctive and perfectly gorgeous bridal and bridesmaids' gowns. The charming evening dresses and Sunday night frocks. Junior Misses', Misses' Women's and half-sizes. Evelyn's Dress Shop, 8 Winter Room 302.

Let Your Hat

Tip and tilt—this is the theme song of the formal millinery opening. Let Josephine Valenti show you how to wear the new tilts—how to lift them on one side and hide them on the other—how to reveal your hair to advantage. And let her make you a darling hat that will be a form you into the enchanting creature that Spring, 1931, means you to be! If you have a hat problem, Miss Valenti will be different from any you ever saw before—some have brims, some have bows, you have flowers. But altogether her hats are "it"—with just enough brim to flirt under. In Baku, Panamalac, Cellophane, Chauvre yolen or fine shiny, rough weave straws. She also makes exquisite wedding veils and bridesmaids' hats. Miss Valenti is at 41 Winter St., seventh floor.

Evening Gowns, $1-$4!

Here's a rare bargain indeed! Sounds almost too good to be true, doesn't it, Anne? But Mendelsohn's are clearing out their slightly used party gowns at these ridiculous prices! You don't need to sigh for a new evening gown—Here's an opportunity to get in the loveliest style, beautiful materials. Several white gowns are only $1—just the lace in two of these gowns is worth much, much more! Now you can have a different gown for every occasion! Of course, you'remember that Mendelsohn's rent bridal and evening gowns—also new or used bridal veils and bridesmaids' gowns with hats to match. Their prices are low, as usual. Mendelsohn's is at 59 Temple Place, 5th floor.

The Bob—My Dear

Will it ever go out? No, not as long as a girl can get an adorable hair cut by L. Max which makes her into a little fashion plate straight from Vogue. He has the secret, Anne — the Parisian method of clipping, shaping and training girls' hair into a soft, silky mass of sheer beauty. He never seen Jean looking so smart or "frisked" as she did with a beautiful L. Max permanent—deep and swirling in her trim new bob. Long hair and short hair are in the wane, Anne, and those 'medium length bobs ending in curls or a swirl are stepping in. They're so attractive and so feminine. If you appreciate the difference between the ordinary and the finer touches in beauty culture, make your appointment today. L. Max, 164 Boylston St. the entire 3rd floor. Dev. 7515.

"SALADA" TEA

The Tea that comes to you "Fresh from the Gardens"

U. S. "Symphonies in Starlight" for Europe

Hollywood—Cal., March 23 (AP)—Mrs. Artie Mason Carter today was enroute to Vienna to interest European audiences. Mrs. Carter took charge of the Hollywood Bowl, a huge amphitheater, a few years ago, began "symphonies under the stars" and proved the average citizen would pay to hear good music. The concerts drew approximately 250,000 for the summer season now.

When a Korean official or gentleman of means wishes to go somewhere he calls a taxi . . . a one-wheel affair operated by trained runners. Read about this in the next (March 29) American Weekly section of the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

About People You Know in Boston Stores

By FRANCES L. BAIRD

33 NEW GRADUATES

The distinctive pin worn by graduates of the Prince School of Store Service Education appeared on the blouses of 28 more salesgirls in the leading department stores of Boston today. This class completed its courses in salesmanship under Miss Jessie Stuart last Friday when the pins were presented and a short address was given by Mrs. Lucinda W. Prince, founder and head of the school. They will share commencement honors at Simmons College next June with those completing their courses at that time.

"SPREAD" FOR L. V. PHELAN

L. V. Phelan, assistant to H. F. Twomey, sales promotion manager of Jordan's, leaves for Columbus, O., Wednesday to become sales manager for Morehouse-Martin Co.

Mr. Phelan, son of former Cong. Michael F. Phelan, has been identified with Jordan's since his graduation from Harvard in 1928, and has made for himself an enviable record there.

He was given a farewell spread by his associates in the sales promotion department at noon Saturday in the conference room at the store, and was presented with a fine brief case.

Attending the luncheon were Mr. Twomey and his entire staff: Mr. Phelan and William French, assistants; David Carpenter, who will fill Phelan's place; Willard C. Campbell, advertising manager, and his assistant Carl Masson; Frank Glynn, advertising manager of the basement store; Reuben Newman, direct mail advertising manager, and staff members Anderson, Greeley, Doris W. Smith, Elsie Agnew, Mary Donahue, Ann Levy and Shirley Epstein.

MISS ZEIDERMAN PROMOTED

Miss Lillian Zeiderman today becomes assistant buyer of underwear for Gilchrist's basement store, having been promoted from the merchandise control division, where she has made a record for knowing merchandise. Miss Zeiderman is scarcely more than a school girl but she has climbed steadily since she began her business career. She was the winner of the $25 cash prize offered by President Felix Vorenberg last fall for the best essay on the Gilchrist radio speech about store service to the public during the business depression. She also won a cash prize awarded by the Boston Evening American last December for brief letters on the series of articles on "Making The Most of Today's Dollar."

A GILCHRIST WEDDING

Another surprise marriage in Gilchrist's personnel was revealed today when Esther Tarmy, of the aisle force, admitted that she became the bride of Edmond Leader of Roxbury over the Washington's birthday holiday. The ceremony was performed at Providence. Mrs. Leader is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Tarmy of Bassett st., Chelsea.

NOTES FROM GILCHRIST'S

Miss Mildred Gay, who was formerly with the Gilchrist Co., returned today as head of the photograph department.

SEE NIAGARA FALLS!

A tremendous amount of work was required from the staff of the operating superintendent, M. F. Whitcomb, of R. H. White Co., to carry in the huge mechanical outfit that produces the illusion of the real, Niagara Falls since nature changed its contour this winter. The electricians worked part of yesterday installing the electrical fixtures that light the exhibit. Charles Coyne, publicity director, is in charge of the daily exhibitions, beginning at 11 o'clock today.

MISS ANDERSON TO WED

Miss Helen Anderson, assistant to Albert Pinchesky, buyer of drugs for Houghton & Dutton Co., will become the bride of John Ahearn, manager of the supply room of the same store, on Sunday evening, April 5, in the rectory of the Immaculate Conception Church in Malden, at a six o'clock ceremony, Rev. Fr. Neagle will officiate.

A wedding reception will be held immediately afterward at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Anderson, on Malden st., Malden. After a short honeymoon, the couple will both return to their positions in the store. They will make their home at 56 Auckland st., Dorchester.

FORD'S BOYS HEAR TALK

Henry Ford's school boys are getting some new points on salesmanship in their country store and roadside stand in a lecture today by Mrs. Lucinda W. Prince. They are entertaining her at luncheon at the school afterward.

LYONS ON NEW JOB

VACATION MOVIES

STORE SNAPSHOTS

Allen Davidson, store manager of Long's, playing squash at B. A. A. . . . and Andrew McCuen, head of Long's watch repair, studying seed catalogues . . . A customer identifying William J. Filene's Sons, Jr., of Kennedy's, by the ever-present white carnation in his lapel . . . W. E. Weld, Kennedy's manager, remaining "in conference" all day because he forgot to shave this morning . . . John Starr, rug buyer, talking golf scores with Carter Hoyt, furniture buyer at Hovey's . . . H. W. Miller, personnel supt., Robert Starbuck, employment manager, Scott Babcock, assistant employment manager, and Arnold Tufts, hiring supervisor at Jordan's, mapping out plans for extra salespeople last Saturday . . . Charles Kochian, manager rug department at Shepard's, knowing the new gold watch presented to him by the E. Carpet Club . . . all the girls in Filene's charge office waving their time cards and calling who will record it, "War-wor, wah" for Mr. Ward.

Fruit Shades in Evening Gowns

By ANN ARDEN

IF YOU want your new evening dress to be utterly devastating, and too flattering for words, you'll do well to choose it in one of the lovely, luscious fruit shades so newly smart this spring. Lime, banana, raspberry, peach and apricot! Their very names spell visions of cool poise and feminine charm. And they look even more delectable than they sound if the wearer gives a serious thought to choosing the shade that becomes her most and complements her own coloring. The nice things about evening clothes this season is that one can dress to her type and be just as striking as she chooses without being a carbon copy of every woman in the room.

COLOR CONTRAST adds interest and charm. Patou's opaline, Chantal's absinthe, and everybody's favorite, Schiaparelli's blue, is where the greens start off, and walk up through ice and water to apple, lettuce, moss jade, almond and emerald. As for blues—we wear them as the color, or combine them with one another, or with other colors.

* * *

THE EVENING costume pictured is fashioned of a delectable combination—a peach and turquoise. The frock of peach flat crepe has round neckline, and slanting seams fitting the hips, curving to a very full skirt, posed over petticoat of net, turquoise crepe ruffles marking its lower edge. The hip length jacket is of turquoise crepe, given a soft effect by the cape sleeves. The frock's belt is turquoise as are the slippers. Bracelet, necklace and earrings are of turquoise beads.

* * *

THE RETURN of petticoats is an intriguing subject. This trend has been mostly exploited in the evening mode, so far, but it seems to be rustling around in taffetas under some of the smartest daytime frocks, too. While the brightly-colored wisps of evening jackets have taken the mode by storm. Some just reach the waist and others have a tentative gesture to wrap about the top of the hips. The secret of the jacket's success is—color. It must make a brilliant dash against a frock, often it echoes the brightest print in a patterned gown. Usually they can be worn with several frocks.

* * *

BRACELETS ARE a charming gesture for the arm that boasts shorter sleeves. They are subtly overcome any awkwardness one may feel at so suddenly coming out at the elbows! They provide, too, a clever way to introduce a colorful contrast in the costume. Almost any sort of bracelet is good this spring—you may wear them singly or in a colorful assortment upon either or both arms. It is well not to go to extremes.

Teaching of Farm Marketing Urged

Co-operative marketing principles should be taught in rural schools, C. C. Teague, vice-chairman of the Federal Farm Board, told State supervisors and teacher-trainers today at their 14th annual North Atlantic Regional Conference, in session in Boston.

Teague declared also his belief city children and college students of the future will need to learn the fundamentals underlying the improved system of selling farm products.

R. L. Wood, Jr., to Wed

By CHOLLY KNICKERBOCKER

Universal Service Society Editor

New York, March 23—While I have no desire to spoil any surprise young Rawson Layman Wood, Jr., may be planning for his friends, editorial duty compels me to record that an official announcement of Rawson's matrimonial intentions will be made before many days have passed.

Ever since last summer, when the young Harvard graduate's mother, the gracious Mrs. R. L. Wood, Sr., of Park ave., New York, acted as hostess at her Newport villa to a learned young miss whose father is, I believe, one of the important professors at the university on the Charles River, society has more or less understood that the young woman in question would become "Teddy" Wood's daughter-in-law.

The romance between Rawson and his bride-to-be, who shall remain nameless until the formal announcement, had its inception while he was attending Harvard.

There is no substitute for quality

You'll never duplicate them at these prices

We bought these two pieces way under cost of labor and materials required to produce them, making them values seldom obtainable. We know we can never secure them again to sell at these prices. And we say confidently, "Neither can you."

Mahogany and gumwood Chest $55

Mahogany Highboy $88

Yet, though the prices are so low, the quality is thoroughly dependable. They are representative of many offerings throughout the store that show good furniture need not be expensive.

'LONELY WIVES' PROVES REAL MIRTHQUAKE ON KEITH-BOSTON SCREEN

HORTON AT BEST IN FILM

The Cast

Mr. Smith ..... Edward Everett Horton
Mrs. Smith ..... Esther Ralston
Diane ..... Laura La Plante
Minnie ..... Patsy Ruth Miller
Schmidt ..... Spencer Charters
Mrs. Mantell ..... Maude Eburne
Musette ..... Georgette Maones

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

THANKS TO YOUNG Russell Mack, "Lonely Wives," film feature at the RKO-Keith Boston this week, deftly skims over the thin ice of naughtiness, and skates its way to triumph as one of the peppiest laughter-getters of the year. It seems to be censor-proof; and yet it makes figure 8's and intricate curlicues right over the danger spots, but never once goes vulgar. That it is so well done and proves such good entertainment is tribute to the skill of Director Mack.

* * *

EDWARD EVERETT HORTON is at his best in this snappy bedroom farce. He has a dual role, which keeps him almost continuously in the spotlight. His Dr. Jekyll self is the one who loves the gay life of the night clubs. His Hyde personality is an actor doing impersonations on the vaudeville stage. To deceive the blinkers, the lawyer hires the performer to take his place in the home circle. Then the fun begins; and soon the bedroom comedy is a perfect snarl of complications. It paces onward with far greater speed than its stage original; and Mrs. Mack makes expert use of the camera to supplement the dialogue, which incidentally is the briskest and brightest we have heard in some time.

Russell Mack

SOPHISTICATED, YES; but the director's touch is a delicate one, with a result that this bedroom mirthquake wings its harmless way to an uproarious finish, and doesn't offend. Not for the children's eyes and ears; and yet a boy seated in front of us yesterday, beside his Daddy, was in continuous spasms of fun, and no one could convince us that his morals were the least bit tainted. However, that's a matter of belief only. Certain it is that "Lonely Wives"—the title is a misnomer, but never mind that—is a smash laugh hit, fast and furious; splendidly directed and grandly photographed. Mr. Horton is hilariously comic clear through; Spencer Charters, corking as the butler; and even the women shine. For instance, Esther Ralston is fine, and no longer merely good looking; and Laura La Plante has passages of excellence.

* * *

ON STAGE is an RKO bill of merit. Karyl Norman has talent as an impersonator; he looks and sings the woman part perfectly—until he draws off his wig. Milton Berle has a way all his own; he has the audience waiting for his next, he is so merrily good. Others are Jed Dooley, and the International Four.

Marion in Belasco Hit

QUINN WILLIAMS AND MARION DAVIES

"The Bachelor Father," which comes to the Loew's State screen next Friday, shows Marion Davies in one of her greatest film successes. It is from the famous Belasco stage hit.

'UNFAITHFUL' AT FENWAY

Many times a wife, but never a bride—until now. At last Ruth Chatterton's screen career, which has presented her as a married woman in eight pictures, brings her forth as a bride on her wedding day in "Unfaithful," at the Fenway. "Unfaithful" is the story of an American girl who marries the "catch" of the season, a handsome war hero and clubman. The girl is ecstatically happy until she discovers that the reputation he has built up is merely a mask for undercover love affairs. His particular sweetheart is the wife of her own brother. Unable to denounce her husband without involving her brother's happiness, the girl seeks a way out of her nerve-wracking position. She throws herself madly into pleasure, and at the end finds happiness.

LONG PROGRAM BY ELLY NEY

By MOSES SMITH

'Conaidrging the reputation Elly Ney enjoys abroad and the fine playing she has done here in the past, a comparative handful of listeners heard her at her Jordan Hall concert last night. But the interesting thing is that the audience came to hear three Beethoven pianoforte sonatas—no less!—and a sprinkling of two sets of variations.

The "big news" is they not only liked this heavy and long program, as most so-called music lovers would call it, but that after two hours of it they applauded heartily and settled down to hear some more. The concert began at 8:00; at 10:20 Mme. Ney was still playing to eager hearers more Beethoven.

In the quality of performance lay another reason for this enthusiasm. Mme. Ney proved to be an exceptionally sympathetic Beethoven interpreter, as she has been an exceptional pianist in the music of other composers in the past. Hearing her in the last movement of the "Moonlight" Sonata or the first movement of the "Appassionata" we marvelled at the magnificent display of temperament. No other woman pianist we have heard—and very few men—could have equalled it. She forced tone—or in less tactful language, she "banged"; but this was trivial beside her prodigious musicality.

People's Symphony in Lengthy Program

The People's Symphony Orchestra gave a lengthy program yesterday in Jordan Hall. Philip Greeley Clapp led the orchestra in his Symphony in A major in its first performance, and played the piano in his Tone Poem, "Norge." Neither piece enriches the symphonic repertoire. Reginald Boardman played the piano part of Rubinstein's D minor Concerto too discretely for the "grand manner" in which it was conceived. Thompson Sonia led the orchestra in "Norge" and in the opening number, Volkmann's Third Serenade for String Orchestra, in which Josef Zimbler played the solo 'cello.

Bowdoin Square

At the Bowdoin Square for the first half of this week, are talking pictures, with seven selected vaudeville acts. The top picture is "The Devil to Pay."

LOS ANGELES, March 23—Who said that gangster stories were on the wane? The film producer who made that brave statement didn't reckon with his public. The gangster of today is as popular as was the western desperado of yesterday.

Wallace Smith, who for years was one of our best known reporters in Chicago, has written a story called "Another One of Your Gangsters." He bases it on his personal experiences while reporting in Chicago. The Smith story will be published in book form by George Putnam & Sons, and just about the time it makes its appearance in book form it will be put on the screen by Radio Pictures. Ricardo Cortez has been chosen by Mr. Smith and William Le Baron to play the lead. What a great break this boy Ricardo Cortez is getting these days.

WELL, THE FIGHT against prohibition can go on. The effort to keep the foreign nations from interfering with our business can be continued. George Bancroft has actually signed with Paramount. After weeks, months, nay, it seems like years, of dickering, arguing back and forth, George has finally decided to stay with the old home company. The negotiations were completed by Henry Fink and George Frank and all is well indeed. Bancroft's first will be "The Marines Have Landed," a story by William Slavens McNutt. I hope I am not speaking out of turn when I say Buddy certainly did himself proud on the radio if the amount of letters received means anything.

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD collected at random: ADELE ROWLAND and CONWAY TEARLE return from an extended trip abroad today. They will be met by many of their friends at the station. BESS MEREDYTH and MRS. DARRYL ZANUCK at the Hollywood Stadium. A pretty blonde with WILLIAM BOYD, stage actor. MRS. LAWRENCE TIBBETT entertaining MOLLY MERRICK and MRS LESLIE HOWARD at lunch at the Embassy. MRS. MESSMORE KENDALL in a green summer dress, lunching with MRS. GEORGE FITZMAURICE at a nearby table. LOUISE BROOKS and MONA MARIS glimpsed among the interesting looking women at the Coconaut Grove at the Ambassador Hotel. A special train of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer executives, players and directors, going to Agua Caliente for the Agua Caliente Handicap. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

LAND RUSH IS FILM FEATURE

"Not Exactly Gentlemen," featuring Victor McLaglen, Fay Wray and Lew Cody, and now at the Beacon and Modern, is based on the opening of the free lands in the Dakotas to white settlers in the early 70's.

Victor McLaglen

While the main theme is the call of the free lands, still there is woven through the screen story the struggle of two young lovers.

On the same program is "The Single Sin," with Bert Lytell and Kay Johnson.

SOVIET FILM AT FINE ARTS

BY SHEER CAMERA magic that certain Russians have the power to work in the movies, "Storm Over Asia," feature at the Fine Arts this week, throws human interest into drab and desolate Mongolia. That gaunt district has been known chiefly for the uncovering of prehistoric saurian fossils, and particularly the biggest egg in all captivity, as everybody knows. Now comes Vsevod Pudkin, foremost Slav director, to give a close-up of the country and its people, and to prove that hearts beat beneath their padded morning suits and evening clothes.

Right near the start, lest it be that any good American fear propaganda peril in this film made in the land of Soviet, let it be stated without fear of disproof that there is about as much harm in the picture as there is in a candy Easter egg. The symbolism of the amazingly good storm sequence and all the references to the "struggle for liberty," have no more danger in them than "Abraham Lincoln" would have to British audiences.

"Storm Over Asia" is a great motion picture in its own right; the cameras tell the story, and do it notably well. It is by no means a box office picture; yet it has more technique than a bushel of Hollywood productions. Just to see the cameras sweep and swing, the speeding narrative perfectly set forth by silent lenses, makes the visit to the Fine Arts worth while.

The acting is superb; particularly the characterization of Tchiklinov as the descendant of Genghis Khan.

AT THE LISTENING POST

CALVIN COOLIDGE, whose columning is reported as being ready for the discard in so far as a morning paper here is concerned, may do a radio bit daily for the press. Here's about how it would go. . . .

"I think radio is wonderful. Very entertaining. Also educational. Proving that we live in a great age. Most programs are good. Rural sketches especially. We can look for television soon. That will be wonderful also. We must be patient. There is too much talking and not enough being said. Economy should be stressed by speakers—otherwise I do not choose to listen," etc., etc. . . . . .

"HELLO, SUCKER," may bring anger to listeners if used as an introduction by Texas Guinan, who made the salutation famous (or is it?). The queen of Manhattan night life is being groomed for a broadcast to be called "Dinin' with Guinan."

* * *

SONG REVIVALS have been given a whirl. They're trying everything all right, if only there was more judgment displayed. Songs like "After the Ball" and "Perfect Day" will never really die and appear to be accepts for revival at intervals. But who can be responsible for thrusting those meaningless localled "hits" of a year or two back—what is the idea anyone know?

* *

INFORMALITY was the keynote of broadcasting not so long ago. Studio directors and "experts" on technique, employed by sponsors, seem to be taking a lot of personality out of programs by injecting straightened, mechanical things and drilling artists to work more or less as automatons. Downright personality is giving way to form. It is becoming noticeable in Maurice Chevalier, and that's too bad.

SOME SPLENDID suggestions have come in to this department, having to do with changing the name of the "column." Send them right along. We'll appoint a group of prominent radio gu shots in town to judge them, give the best one a nice prize (what will it be) and everything. Come on, let's make it a contest—eh?

TRAVELS 3000 MILES TO KILL

A Reporter's Story of a Famous Maine Murder Case

By BERT FORD

(Who Worked on the Case as a Reporter)

Previous instalments told how Benjamin H. Turner, Iowa pacifist, conscientious objector, and army deserter during the World War, traveled 3,000 miles from Mexico City to Portland, Me., to kill James D. Hallen. Turner claimed he paid Hallen $1,300 to defend him on the charge of murdering a Mexican who swindled him. He declared Hallen betrayed and robbed him. Turner said the day he was acquitted of slaying the Mexican he vowed to track and kill Hallen.

It was one of those tensely dramatic moments that reminded one of the dropping of the proverbial pin. Spectators in a New England court room are seldom thrilled as they were by the weird story related by Benjamin H. Turner in Cumberland county superior court in Portland, four years ago.

The sudden change that swept over the calm, sad-faced young man, was startling. He fairly bristled defiance. It was clear before he finished that he, because of his queer mentality, felt supreme.

For the jury to challenge his recital was inconceivable to Turner, so-called "Mystery man from Mexico." When the hard-headed New England jurors replied with a verdict of guilty of murder, Turner collapsed. He was stunned for days. He was so indignant, so outraged that he refused food and went on the first of a series of hunger strikes. But let us first take a glimpse of Turner's remarkable testimony.

"I'D KILL AGAIN"

Under a raking cross-fire by County Solicitor Ralph Ingalls, who assisted Attorney General Raymond Fellows, Turner indulged in frequent outbursts of temper.

"Would you destroy Hallen again if you had the opportunity?" asked Ingalls.

The words rang through the court chamber. Women shivered. The expressions on the faces of the jurors hardened. Turner turned a sullen face as the prosecutor continued to ply his verbal lash.

Q—Were you warned by the judge after you had been freed for killing a man in Mexico, never to kill another man for any reason?

A—I was thus warn d at my action (oubique, employed by sponsors, seem to be taking a lot of personality out of programs by injecting straightened, mechanical things and drilling artists to work more or less as automatons. Downright personality is giving way to form. It is becoming noticeable in Maurice Chevalier, and that's too bad.

Q—Was that before your father's death? A—Yes. I thought as a result of what he had done that I was judge and that if he wasn't willing and able to settle with me in any way, that was his funeral.

Q—Did Hallen's criminal record have anything to do with your decision to kill him? A—No.

Q—Did you know of Hallen's criminal record? A—One of the Mexican newspapers published something about his criminal record and I knew he must have one to treat me as he did.

Q—Did the Mexican you killed have a criminal record? A—He did.

Q—Did the $827 the Mexican took from you cause you to kill him? A—It didn't make any difference if it was only 827 cents. It wasn't the money. It was the humiliation. I didn't think it possible to reach the devil in any other way.

Q—Did you ever investigate the financial responsibility of the Mexican whom you murdered in Mexico? A—I started to. I had suspicions.

Q—Kindly answer my question. Did you investigate his financial responsibility? A—I tried to, but couldn't really—he would do what he did. He seemed to hold and hypnotize me. I felt his scheme was crooked but in spite of my suspicions I couldn't resist him or doubt his sincerity, so I advanced the money.

HALLEN NO HELP

Q—What was the name of the Mexican lawyer to whom you paid a retainer? A—Ocampa. He defended me and brought my case to trial, but had to have another lawyer help him.

Q—Was self defense you defense for that murder, or was it irresistible physical and mental impulse? A—There was an element of self defense. I knew the man was dangerous and that he was armed and I saw a loaded pistol on the table in his office. Self defense was merely a minor plea. The main plea made in my behalf by my American lawyers was physical and mental force irresistible.

Q—Wasn't the plea used by Ocampa the one suggested by Hallen? A—Hallen in letters to me claimed that he helped but I doubted that he ever did.

Q—Who was Atty. Bannigan. A—An American lawyer who represented a New York law firm and had an office in Mexico City.

Q—Didn't Bannigan say Hallen had outlined in detail the facts used by Atty. Ocampa? A—Hallen discussed details in his talks with me in the Mexican prison.

Q—Wasn't it a fact that two Mexicans had been electrocuted in New York and didn't Hallen say the Mexican government sought reprisals and demanded your execution in consequence? A—There was talk to that effect.

Q—And didn't Hallen advise the strictest secrecy in the conduct of your case as a result of the reprisal talk? A—Yes.

Q—And didn't he advise taking up your case with the State Department in Washington? A—Yes.

Q—And didn't you agree to delay because of the acute feeling in Mexico? A—Yes.

Q—If the detective had reported that Hallen had led an exemplary life, would what he had done to you be enough, in your opinion, to destroy him? A—Yes, on the spur of the moment.

Q—Did you ever change your mind about your plan to kill Hallen? A—Not for a minute.

Q—Did you hesitate in Kansas, after your father's funeral, fearing the punishment? A—The question of punishment never entered into it.

There was evidence that Turner, who studied chemistry at college, bought a book on poisons on his way from Mexico, to track down Hallen, figuring that a deadly poison might be the safest agency, but finally decided to shoot his victim.

Turner's counsel received a letter during the trial that a price had been placed on Haller's head by the authorities in Hawaii for alleged sedition. In the course of his adventurous life Hallen went to Hawaii in the early 20's and became a confidential agent to the late Queen Lilliuokasani.

The final chapter tomorrow will tell of the scenes that followed Turner's conviction, what the forewoman of the jury said and how the prisoner nearly died on hunger strike.

BERLIN, VIENNA DEFEND TARIFF PACT PLANS

Berlin, March 23 (AP)—Government officials in Germany and Austria were busy today answering inquiries of other European countries about the proposed Austro-German customs accord.

Delegations were received by Prime Minister Schober in Vienna and by Foreign Minister Curtius in Berlin. The principal cause for concern given by representatives of other European nations was the possibility that the proposed new accord might be a violation of Austria's independence and contrary to the provisions of post-war treaties and the Geneva protocol.

In Berlin it was said German and Austrian legal experts were agreed that it could be shown the new accord violated no existing treaty. Baron Szterenyi, Hungary's economic expert, declared that in his opinion, Austria's independence is guaranteed in the new proposal.

QUESTIONED BY BRIAND.

In Paris, Aristide Briand started a movement approved by the French cabinet to determine whether the accord threatened the independence of Austria. The French press heralded it as the first step in an Austro-German union and a possible threat against European conciliation.

In Budapest the agreement was regarded as the greatest sensation since the war.

The British foreign office expressed no opinion, but in Paris it was predicted a statement of the British viewpoint would be made after the arrival there of Foreign Minister Henderson, who was on the way from London to attend a meeting of the committee on the European Economic Union of Aristide Briand.

EVENTUAL FREE TRADE

The guiding principles of the customs accord approved by the cabinets of Germany and Austria include a customs union for interchange of goods with each other and with other countries.

Both countries, it is planned, will introduce identical tariff schedules which can be changed only by mutual agreement. Export and import duties between Germany and Austria would be abolished eventually.

4-ALARM BLAZE IN SOUTH END

at Union Park and Washington sts., was protected from the flames by its fireproof structure but a cordon of police were thrown about the building to protect its funds.

According to Chief Henry Fox, the fire started on the second floor of the Washington st. building, occupied by the Old Colony Furniture Co. It spread along the overhead passageway to the Waltham st. buildings and burning embers spread rapidly.

He estimated the damage at $75,000.

Thirty persons were driven out from the furniture concern, 35 from the International Shoe Counter Co., more than 100 from the Schoinick Shoe Co., the latter two in the Waltham st. building, and 125 employes of the Pendleton Wood Heel Co., at 1335 Washington st.

STORES SUFFER LOSS.

Smoke and water damage was suffered by the People's Market, Atlas grocery and provision store, Cathedral fish market and the La Franco smoke shop, on the Washington st. side.

At the first of the fire heavy rolling smoke proved a threat to lodgers on both Union Park and Waltham sts., and many of them fled to the street with little or no belongings.

Quick work by the fire department reassured them, however, and they returned to their homes.

As the rear passageway burned away, spreading the flames to the other buildings, falling timbers narrowly missed several firemen who had responded with the first apparatus.

AMBULANCES CALLED

Among the first on the scene were Fire Commissioner Edward F. McLaughlin and Police Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman, the latter ordering all downtown ambulances and small patrol wagons to the scene to care for any injured. None received any hurts, however.

Street car traffic on Washington st. was shut off during the fire and trains on the Elevated structure moved slowly through the danger area. Extra police were ordered into the area to straighten the traffic tangles.

After the fire had been extinguished, Chief Fox said the engineer of the Washington st. building told him he had shut off the sprinkler system because he feared the water would flood the boiler room and cause an explosion.

Two Dedham Houses Damaged by Flames

A general alarm fire at the home of Roscoe D. Phelps, 127 Oakdale ave., Dedham, spread to the roof of the home of Mr. and Mrs. K. C. Robinson alongside, today, with damage estimated at more than $5000.

The fire departments of both Dedham and East Dedham were called to fight the flames. Occupants of both homes were driven out, but escaped without injury.

$145,000,000 IN SPRING JOBS

Washington, March 23 (AP)—During the first week of spring, public works contracts awelled to $145,292,508, the largest total yet reported to the President's employment committee.

At the same time the Bureau of Labor statistics reported construction totalling $100,311,856 had been authorized in 342 cities during February.

The public works contracts, including post offices and other federal buildings, state and municipal buildings, colleges, hospitals, churches, bridges, highways and streets, sewer construction and other work of this type, were let in 38 states and the District of Columbia.

MYSTERY FIRES IMPERIL MANY

Worcester, March 23—The police probe of several fires here during the past week was pressed with new vigor today following three suspicious blazes which forced eight families to the street.

An 18-year-old youth, whose name is being withheld by police, was taken into custody after he admitted sounding one alarm. After questioning he was released and sent home.

The three fires today all occurred in the same section despite extra police protection in the neighborhood.

4 MORE MILLS TO REOPEN IN FALL RIVER

Fall River, March 23—Joy came to Fall River today in announcement that four more mills of the American Printing Co. will reopen shortly, after being closed since last June. It means work for 3900 operatives.

Mill No. 2 reopened two weeks ago, was closed last week because of a strike which was settled Saturday. The employes went back to work there today.

The company announced Mill No. 3 will reopen Wednesday, No. 5 will reopen early next week, and No. 1 and 4 will reopen soon after that.

Rt. Rev. James E. Cassidy, auxiliary bishop of Fall River, issued a statement today replying to one by Richard P. Borden and reiterating the bishop's contention that the average cotton mill wage here is only $16 a week.

Borden had said the average was as high as $17 or $18.

Bishop Cassidy suggested auditors from out of town examine the books and if they prove he is wrong, he said, he would donate $1000 for a bed at Union Hospital, of which Borden is an executive, but that if Borden lose, he donate $1000 for a bed in St. Ann's or the Truesdale Hospital.

SECOND SECTION

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

GREATER BOSTON NEWS

BOSTON, MONDAY, MARCH 23, 1931

What Has Happened So Far

Mary Lou Thurston, a beautiful and vivacious girl of the "home" type, orphaned by the death of her parents, lives with her aunt and uncle, Clara and Howard Sanderson. The former is private secretary to a publisher, and the latter an engineer. Mary Lou looks after Billy, their lively youngster. Larry Mitchell, energetic young newspaper reporter, is Mary Lou's pal. Sanderson gets a wonderful business chance to go to the Orient and take his wife as secretary. Mary Lou is to stay temporarily with Grandma Jennings, Clara's mother, and Adelaide Jennings, another daughter of Mrs. Jennings, a robust invalid who revels in her ills. Billy is to make his home with his grandmother till the Sandersons return. Larry is eager to marry Mary Lou and take care of her, but Mary Lou convinces him they are merely good pals and not sweethearts, and asks him to help her get a job.

Now Go On With the Story

By Faith Baldwin

Author of "The Office Wife," "Alimony" and other famous serials

CLARA SPOKE of Larry.

"Larry Mitchell thinks we're brutes to go off and leave you!" she commented.

"Did he say so?" asked Mary Lou, bristling in instant defense of her relatives.

"Well, no, hardly that," conceded Clara, laughing. "But—I could tell. He's awfully fond of you."

She broke off abruptly. Unsuitable as a marriage between Mary Lou and Larry Mitchell had seemed to her in less overwrought times, and still seemed, deep in her heart, she could not help wondering, for one wild moment, if, after all, such a solution wouldn't be the best, the safest thing for Mary Lou under the present topsy-turvy circumstances. She opened her firm, red mouth to say something and shut it again, irresolute. But Mary Lou, with the almost psychic sense she had at times, and a very disconcerting sense she often found it, forestalled her by reading her thoughts nearly and accurately.

"And I'm awfully fond of him," she told Clara quickly, "but oh, I know what you're thinking. It —wouldn't work. Larry doesn't love me, Clara, and I don't love him. Not in the way we should —to get married, I mean," she went on, flushing, confused, adorable in her confusion.

"I know," said Clara and sighed a little.

Arriving at Oakdale they engaged the lone and rickety taxi and drove to Grandma Jennings on, actually, Applelane st., the car sobbing and snorting conspicuously, much to Billy's amusement.

The Jennings homestead, to which Mrs. Jennings had come as a bride, in which Adelaide and Clara and the vanished others had been born, was at the back from the quiet street, in a garden which, in summer, was a tangle of color, a riot of bloom, a glory of sunlight and fragrance. Even now, in mid October, a few gallant dahlias and glowing Zinnias stood bravely, and on a great Gruss-an-Teplitz rose bush the dark red blossoms bloomed undaunted and heavy with scent.

White House

The house was white, with hand-made shingles, the shutters a faded, blue-green, that charming, mellow color. And Grandma Jennings was standing at the picket gate, in her Sunday stiff black silk and her best apron. She was a little woman, with snapping black eyes and a will of her own, which underlay her sweetness like a streak of steel. Her skin was still pink and white and very little wrinkled; only her hands betrayed her age.

Billy flung himself at her knees with a shout of welcome She disentangled herself somehow and presented a cool cheek to her daughter, her son-in-law, and Mary Lou, in turn.

Adelaide was in the house and lying, as usual, on the very slippery horsehair sofa, a knitted afghan over her knees. Adelaide didn't look ill and for the very good reason that she was in excellent health. But she refused to believe it and she had more aches and pains to the minute than most people have in a lifetime. She had, long ago, discovered that it was rather nice to be waited on, to have the neighbors run in with soup and custards, garden flowers and calves' foot jelly. She liked being called "poor Miss Jennings" and she adored hearing "how patient" she was "under her burden." And what most amazed her relatives—Clara in particular—was that old Mrs Jennings, usually so clear-sighted and so impatient of fraud, should so completely believe in Adelaide's "heart attacks" and Adelaide's "rheumatics," and be even a little proud of so gloriously invalid a daughter.

Adelaide was a plump and graying blonde, with an expression of resigned sweetness now second nature to her. Billy rushing into the living room where she lay, cast himself across her recumbent form without let or hindrance.

"Softly," begged Aunt Adelaide in her die-away voice, "Auntie has such a headache. How well you look, Billy boy!" she added, almost accusingly.

On Tiptoe

Clara and Howard tiptoed up from force of habit—to remove their insensitive son, and inquired dutifully for Adelaide's well-being.

Adelaide sat up, reached for the smelling salts which stood on a small, entirely beautiful tip-top table beside her, inhaled deeply, and then launched into an account of three heart attacks as many weeks, a stiff knee and a sense of breathlessness.

"I just can't get my breath at times," said the sufferer, proudly, "but—I'm as well as can be expected, thank you."

She then looked at Mary Lou, rosy from the crisp autumn air, and inquired fretfully:

"Is that paint on your face, Mary Lou?"

"Why, no, Aunt Adelaide," Mary Lou remarked, giving the elder woman her usual courtesy title, "I never use it—I don't need to."

"Well," said Aunt Adelaide, "I don't like so much color in a young girl. Tell me," she asked Howard, avidly, "is there any history of tuberculosis in Mary Lou's family? I don't like that bright color," she repeated.

"For goodness' sakes, Adelaide, no . . . why should there be?" asked Howard, irritated. "Mary Lou comes of perfectly healthy stock."

At this moment, as Adelaide was about to burst into description of a school friend, "very like Mary Lou in coloring" who had died of galloping consumption before her shocked family was eyes aware she was sickening, Grandma Jennings arrived with

28 NEW FIRMS IN BOSTON AREA

Since the beginning of 1931 Greater Boston has added 28 new names to its list of manufacturing industries, according to a report just issued by the Bureau of Commercial and Industrial Affairs of the Chamber of Commerce.

The new industries represent a wide range of products. Among them is the Amalgamated Wood Heel Company, a new Lynn concern, with a force of 50 now employed and substantial increase contemplated.

The South Boston Iron Works recently began the manufacture of fire escapes, iron stairs and fences. The downtown Boston district is represented by three new printing establishments. In West Roxbury the Rural Manufacturing Company is producing a new radio receiver. The Vegetable Products Company of America, engaged in dehydrating fruits and vegetables, is newly located in Brighton.

RE-FINANCING PLAN SOUGHT BY THEM

Commissioner Says No Definite Proposal Made; Loans Are Being Arranged

Officials of the Industrial Bank & Trust Co., closed last Thursday by Bank Commissioner Arthur Guy, conferred with the commissioner for an hour and 20 minutes today without any plan being reached under which the two banks could be reopened.

On the bank committee with the commissioner at the State House were Treasurer Harry L. Lollis and Directors Charles H. Bucek, J Waldo Pond and John J. Curley, brother of Mayor Curley and former city treasurer.

At the end of the conference, Commissioner Guy said the committee offered no plan to him, and declared it was merely a preliminary meeting.

"The next move is theirs" he said.

The committee members declared they expected to meet with the commissioner again Wednesday or Thursday, at which time they believe they would have a proposition under way by which the bank could be reopened.

The main bank of the company, Washington st., South End, and the Dorchester branch in Codman sq., were closed because, the bank commissioner said, the company's capital of $200,000 had been seriously impaired, if not completely wiped out, by unwise investments.

There are 8800 depositors, many of them small merchants in the South End and Dorchester. To relieve their pressing needs, Commissioner Guy had nearly completed arrangements today for banks in the Boston Clearing House to lend depositors up to 50 or 90 per cent of their deposits.

'RED' FOE GETS DEATH THREAT

Telephone threats were reported to Lyn police today by Walter Mn Dan, 37, clerk of the state aid, soldiers' relief and director of the Lynn Municipal Employment Bu-

He did the third one came to his home last night in a voice of broken English that demanded he "come across or he'll like a .45 bullet better than his family."

Mn Dan was instrumental in breaking up a meeting of unemployed in Lynn on Feb. 25, the same day the Red riots occurred on Boston Common.

$50 Weekly for News Tips

Do you want to get money for being alert? If so, the Boston Evening American offers the opportunity. Each week $50 in prizes will be given for news and picture tips telephoned in to the News-Tip Editor at Liberty 4000.

What is a news tip? It's the information that something of interest to Greater Bostonians has taken place or will take place. Do you know, for instance, that an interesting picture is to be obtained, that an accident or an unusual event has happened, that there is going to be a business merger? That's a news tip.

If you have a camera, take a picture of some news event while it is happening. Bring your pictures to the American quick. Delay often spoils them for use.

There will be $15 given weekly for the best or the most unusual event news up received; $10 for the next best, $5 for the next best, and $2 prizes for each of the 10 next most valuable tips.

SOCIETY GIRL IN DANCE RECITAL

Boston People Attend Program of Francesca Braggiotti Lodge at New York

The talented Braggiotti family of Boston—Francesca, Gloria and their brother, Mario—entertained their society friends last night in New York in aid of charity—and Francesca realized an ambition.

Francesca Braggiotti, now Mrs John Davis Lodge of Boston and Washington, her husband being the grandson of the late Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, had long wished to give a full-length dance recital, and this was the culmination of her hopes.

Boston society folk as well as numbers of New York's mythical "400" were in the audience including Mrs. William Gaston, Mrs. Lorillard Spencer, Mrs. Adolf Lederburg, Mrs. Richard S. Aldrich, Mrs. Livingston Gallatin, Mrs. Reginald de Koven, Mrs. Ernest Iselin and rows and rows of others.

Collaborating with the dancing society sisters, Francesca and Gloria, were Mme. Nina Koshetz, Russian soprano, and Jacques Fray, pianist. Mario Braggiotti joined with the latter in several composi tions for two pianos.

12 VICTIMS OF FATAL BLAZE TESTIFY

Only One Witness Permitted in Room at Time in Effort to Fix the Blame

A "star chamber" inquest into the fatal Hotel Lenox fire, surrounded by mystery as well as secrecy, was conducted at the Broad st. fire engine house in Lynn today by State Fire Marshal John V. Reth.

Mystery developed when three officials made a hasty trip to the ruins.

Police witnesses were being heard when Marshal Reth sent for John Batchelor, chauffeur for Fire Chief Edward E. Chase. Batchelor hurried out and got B. Frank Moody, ely electrician, taking him away from his dinner at a restaurant.

Moody then accompanied Ellis Dennis, State electrical examiner, and Capt. John Day, prevention bureau chief in the Lynn fire department, to the scene of the tragedy. When they returned Marshal Reth and Dennis conferred, excluding other officials attending the inquest.

The inquest is to determine if anyone was criminally to blame for the deaths of Arthur N. Young, Arthur Harvey and Martin J. Travers, victims of the fire.

Twelve of the 60 persons who escaped or were rescued by firemen were among the witnesses on hand today.

Two representatives of District Attorney Hugh A. Cregg of Essex County listened to the testimony. Several of the witnesses, including Mrs. Mabel Eaton, who was rescued by firemen, are still suffering from burns and other injuries.

Twenty-five witnesses in all were called including seven firemen, four policemen, Charles Dow, night clerk of the hotel, who discovered the fire, and Adam Ar [illegible] who was playing miniature golf on the night before in the basement, where the fire started.

The inquest was behind closed doors in the office of Fire Chief Edward E. Chase. Besides Marshal Reth, the only ones permitted to hear the witnesses were State Detective Joseph Grady, State Building Inspector Harold McCann and the district attorney's representatives, John Muckian and John Sullivan. Only one witness was permitted in the room at any time.

The witnesses, who were guests at the hotel, were Frank Nelson, Lawrence White, Mrs. Eaton, Harold Hersey, Curtis Rockus, William Eaton, Lillian Whosten, James Wilkinson, L. A. Porter, Fred Bennett, Fred Walsh and Frank M. Damon.

SUNDAY SPORTS BILL WINS

Sunday sports were victorious today in the Senate, where the bill allowing another hour of professional sports passed by a vote of 16 to 14.

The bill changes the old hours of 2 p. m. to 6 p. m. and sets the new times at 1:30 p. m. to 6:30 p. m.

This extension of time will eliminate in the baseball season, the sudden ending of a game in the ninth inning, with a team coming from behind in the first half, only to have the score revert back to the end of the eighth when the 6 o'clock closing hour chopped off the contest.

2 Held in $15,000 in Robbery Attempt

Charged with assault with intent to rob, Martin Davis of Shawmut st. and Manuel Gomes of Cedar st., Roxbury, were held in $15,000 in Roxbury court today. The complainant is Frank Neustadt, 461 Walnut ave., Roxbury, who charged that the two men attempted to rob him of rent money he had collected Saturday.

WILKINS' SUB AT NAVY YARD

New York, March 23 (INS)—The Nautilus, Capt. Sir Hubert Wilkins' polar submarine, arrived at the Brooklyn navy yard today in tow of two tugs, which has taken it from the coast guard base at Clifton, Staten Island.

Sir Hubert Wilkins, Lincoln Ellsworth, one of the backers of the projected trip to the North Pole, Rear-Admiral William W. Phelps, commander of the navy yard, and his aide, Commander G. W. Simpson, were among a crowd of 200 who witnessed the mooring of the craft.

The Nautilus will be formally christened tomorrow by Jean Jules Verne, grandson of the author of "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea." The submarine also will remain here for the installation of instruments.

Willard I. Grimmer, quartermaster, fell from the narrow deck of the boat and was lost as the submarine was off West Bank Light, two and one-half miles from Swinburne Island, below quarantine.

Lieut.-Com. Sloan Danenhower, commanding the Nautilus, told in a radio yesterday to Sir Hubert here, of the dramatic efforts to rescue Grimmer, whose home was given as 17 Arch st., Philadelphia.

ASTROLOGY NO GOOD ON SELF

Astrology is astrology, but it doesn't let an astrologer see into the future and tell when he can pay his debts.

No less an authority than an astrologer himself, Calvin Braganza admitted this today in poor debtor's court, where he was hailed after failing to pay a judgment of $145.56 and costs of $8.80 to Jennie Brown, doing business as "This Week in Boston."

The astrologer said he worked mostly at charity bazaars, but as there have been no charity bazaars he was, of course, not working. Now, even 50 cents a week could be pay, as he had been ordered.

"You an astrologer, you were able to look into the future?" asked Judge Elijah Adlow.

"Yes, Your Honor," answered Braganza.

Judge Adlow: "Couldn't you look into the future and tell when you'll be able to pay this plaintiff?"

Braganza: "No, Your Honor."

Victim of Hammer Attack Improves

John W. Strom, aged filling station proprietor and former special police officer of Somerville, who was brutally assaulted with a hammer by two thugs several days ago, was improving today at Central Hospital, Somerville. Although his condition is still serious, he was able to talk to Inspector Daniel M. O'Connell about the assault. Dr. Frederick Derby today performed a successful operation on Strom and removed an eye which had been ruptured by the hammer blows.

Don't Pay

If This Fails To Knock Your Cold In Few Hours

Feel Like a New Person Almost Before You Know It

Hill's Cascara Quinine is GUARANTEED to knock a cold in a jiff. To relieve the pain, to break up tightness. If it fails, you pay nothing.

This guarantee is made to prove to those who have tried fifty ways to lose a cold, that the surest way is to go back to first principles and use something that you KNOW does the work.

Take two tablets now. Then follow directions on box. Drink lots of water, too—that's all. You'll feel like a new person almost before you know it. Pain eased, congestion broken; your mind cleared and yourself ready to go back on the job with a wallop.

That's because Hill's is a scientific formula made to DO ONE THING WELL: to knock colds in a hurry—not to cure a score of different troubles.

Costs only a few cents at any drug store. Get package now. Your money back if it fails. Try it—you'll be glad that you did.

POLICE SIGNALS ARE 'PERFECT'

The new police signal boxes system on trial in Dorchester is working [illegible] he experts. Capt. Daniel [illegible] hings of that division announced today.

Yesterday he tried the third circuit of nine boxes scattered in [illegible] sections of the district to [illegible] convincing him the system is a vast improvement over the old method.

The system, with three circuits and more than 30 boxes, will be opened officially Wednesday night in the presence of Mayor Curley, Police Commissioner Hultman, members of the Legislature and business men.

Theater Fire Gives Quincy a Scare

A fire in Alhambra theater in the heart of the Quincy business district caused considerable excitement today and called virtually all fire apparatus in the city. The blaze starting in the cellar of the theater sent clouds of heavy smoke through the building and over the street in the vicinity. No damage was reported and the flames were soon under control.

CURLEY SCORES WAGE CUTTERS

The concern of the [illegible] brought about by the present [illegible] on [illegible] is [illegible] cutting of salaries and cutting wages, even though the average business man and some of our foremost Governors believe so, Mayor James M. Curley today.

[illegible] or made this statement [illegible] address[illegible] a group of [illegible] women members of the Boston City Federation, an organization representing 30,000 persons affiliated with clubs and civic organizations of this community.

"We are the richest country in the world," the mayor said. "The prosperity of America is not dependent upon the prosperity of Europe. It is not dependent upon our imports or exports. It is dependent upon the created wealth of the American people; upon the wages they earn. When wages are high our people spend a lot of money. A continuation of high wages is the only solution of this problem.

"This period of depression, in my opinion, could have been prevented if those in authority had had the courage to meet the situation."

WOMEN HOBOES TO BE FETED

Women hoboes—if any—will find a haven in Boston by Wednesday morning, if they happen to be passing this way.

This was one of the many plans announced today by Ralph E. Dalton, "King of the Hoboes," as he presided at the annual convention today at 388 Tremont st., South End.

Not only that, Dalton said, but the hobo who comes this way must meet the cultured Bostonians, a condition he intends to bring about.

Sunday parades to churches are also included in his plan as well as free laundry service, an employment office, agents to meet prisoners emerging from jails and the publication of a national magazine.

He lashed out criticism at [illegible] of cheap feeding places for women hoboes, and said a system of pensions of hoboes is being worked out.

BUSINESS PRESSURE BLAMED FOR BURKE'S RESIGNATION

ACTION COMES AS SUSPRISE TO COLLEAGUES

Illness of a Business Aide Is Blamed for Retirement From Fall River Finance Board

James A. Burke, Jr., member of the new Fall River finance board, resigned for business reasons, it was revealed today in his letter of resignation to Gov. Ely.

Burke was reported to have resigned his post through dissatisfaction with Chairman Frank J Donahue and former State Treasurer James Jackson

His letter of resignation told of illness of his business assistant that occurred the day he was appointed to the board and failed to mention any show of dissatisfaction.

The letter read in part:

"The day after I received my appointment as a member of the Fall River finance board, the most valuable member of my personal organization, Mr. James H. O'Neil, my assistant, sustained a severe shock.

"Since that time he has been physically unable to take part in the work of our plant and he will probably continue to be in this state for a long period."

"Under the conditions confronting me in the organizations which I manage, I find the added duties as a member of the board has placed a severe physical and mental strain upon me.

"In justification to the corporations by whom I am employed, I therefore tender my resignation from the board and respectfully ask that I be relieved of the duties as soon as it is convenient for you to do so."

YOUTH HELD IN NATICK KILLING

Raymond Oliver, 22, wanted for the murder of Michael C. Christie in Natick on March 14, 1930, was arrested at gunpoint on the Newburyport turnpike this morning by Officer Walter Houghton of the Newburyport police, after he had been identified by James L. Woodson of Laconia, from whom Oliver is said to have stolen a horse and an automobile early this month

Oliver confined, in the Laconia jail under the name of Philip Longmore, attempted suicide by slashing his wrists with a razor blade. A week later he escaped.

During his confinement on a larceny charge, an amateur detective who took fingerprints exposed him as the man hunted for more than a year for the murder of Christie, a Natick storekeeper.

WAR VET GETS 45 DAYS FOR CONTEMPT

Refuses to Support Children of First Marriage; Remark Costs 15 Extra

Refusal to pay his first wife $20 a week for support fo three children, and a muttered comment on justice, caused Percy Newhouse, Wilmington veteran of the World War, to be sentenced to 45 days in the House of Correction, today.

Sentence was imposed by Judge John C. Leggat in Middlesex Probate Court, to which Newhouse was haled on a contempt petition brought by the first Mrs. Newhouse.

An affecting scene occurred in the courtroom when Newhouse said goodbye to his second wife, formerly Miss Helen Parker of Lynn, and their one-year-old child.

"I'll stay in jail the rest of my life rather than pay," Newhouse declared.

DIVORCED IN 1927

His first wife, whom he married in Bordeaux, France, in 1919, was granted a divorce in May, 1927, with custody of three children, and Newhouse was ordered to pay $20 a week for their support

In November last he was in court for failure to pay; it being alleged he was $681 in arrears. Judge Leggat sentenced him to 30 days, but withdrew it when Newhouse paid $100 on account

"NO MONEY, NO WORK."

Today it was charged he had paid only $25 since his previous appearance. He said he had no money and could find no work

Asked why he did not borrow on his bonus, Newhouse said he would not support the children under present conditions

"All right then, 30 days," said the judge.

Newhouse muttered something about justice and Judge Leggat said:

"That will cost you 15 days more."

DEAR MR. KABIBBLE, SHALL I MARRY AN ACTOR? = K.W.

TODAY'S TRUE STORY

SIGNED AND SEALED

He Found Her True

IF FLAVIA and George had not forgotten the adage that walls have ears they would have lowered their voices when they had that spat in the cloakroom off the ornate offices of the C. F. Strong Metal Products Corporation. As a matter of fact, Chester Flack did hear them. He smiled as he stood behind an open locker door in a far corner.

"I want to know where you were last night, Flavia," George demanded.

Meantime, Chester slipped out of the far door of the cloak room. He was still smiling to himself. Chester was the Sena Drummel of the Strong office, not bad-looking, with all the traits of a Lothario. He had been quite successful in the pursuit of fleeting romances, but always Flavia had turned a cold shoulder to his blandishments. True to type, Chester promised himself that by some devious way he would yet break down her resistance. It mattered not a whit to him that there was an understanding between her and George. Let George look out for himself.

So, in passing Flavia's desk on the way to his own, Chester casting a roving eye over it, noticed her bag and some trinkets lying there. With a quick glance around to see that he was not observed, Chester picked up something from the desk and hurried on.

A moment later Flavia flounced to her place and sat down with an air of determination that signified there had been no treaty of peace between her and George. He emerged from the cloak room looking neither to right nor left and made his way to the private office of Mr. Edge, where he began his work as assistant secretary.

It was a long, rather sorrowful day for George, a day unlighted by the smiles of Flavia and permeated by his own dark thoughts. But five o'clock came at last. And George was more than surprised when, as he was slipping on his coat, Chester Flack slapped him on the back.

"How's George?" he asked heartily. "Got the car with one today. Like a life as far as Jamaica? I'm going that way, buddy."

They had gone but a short way when Chester suddenly pulled up to the curb. "Wait here a minute," he said. "Forget to get some cigarets." He piled out of the car and entered a little tobacco shop, with a smiling glance backward.

George put his hand down to his side to smooth out his overcoat. His fingers touched a small round object. He picked it up, held it in the palm of his hand under the flashlight to examine it. Then he gave a start like one stabbed by a sudden pain. For he held the pretty green pen he had given Flavia for her birthday, he saw with the tiny gold initials "F. V." set into its barrel. Half dazed, George looked down again to the car cushion, ran his hand across the leather and picked up two hairpins.

Chester came out of the store and with a word of apology for keeping George waiting, jumped into the car. As he was about to put his foot on the starter, George's fingers clamped his arm.

"See what I found on the seat," said George bitingly. He held out the pen and hairpins.

Chester gazed at them with an innocent air. "Oh," he exclaimed gilly, "those are probably my sister's. She uses the car often."

He glowered at his companion. Chester shrugged his shoulders and made a move as if to start the car. "Wait!" demanded George. "I'm getting out here. You know as well as I do what pen that is. And I want to say, Flack, that I consider you a weak and a cad."

At that moment determination came to him. He'd go back to his home in Jamaica on his way to his own. She must surely have arrived by this time.

George, his hand shaking a little, pressed the electric button. Flavia herself answered the door.

"Oh!" she cried, drawing back with surprise, her cheeks flushing a deeper pink. Then: "Come in, George. I'm so glad!" The smile he got was "divine" and the blue eyes were frank, affectionate.

"Oh!" said Flavia, "I'm so glad you found it. I feared I had lost it for good, I missed it this morning at school. And you took the gift pen and pressed it to her cheek.

Then Flavia did a queer thing as George stood with a studied frown. She went to a desk and opened a leaf in a sheet of writing paper on it. She sat down and hastily scribbled a few lines and George came and stood looking over her shoulder. With a laugh, she turned and handed the sheet to him. "Read it," she said.

"We hereby promise each other that never, never again will we rush into a silly misunderstanding, and hereby affirm this pledge by affixing hearts our hands and seals."

George smiled with relief as he handed the paper back to her.

Gout Hits Man Who Indulges

By DR. COPELAND.

IN READING the works of Charles Dickens, you are sure to run across characters described as "gouty" persons. Thackeray and other writers of his period treat pretty much as spoke of this ailment.

Dr. Copeland

Gout was a penalty paid by the individual who led an inactive life, indulged in little exercise, and lived on the fat of the land. These writers gave it to the "country squire," who in his life had partaken more frequently of alcoholic beverages than of water.

With the growing practice of temperance, gout is far less common. However, the disease may afflict an individual who leads a sober life, but whose ancestors were of the self-indulging type.

Hereditary influences are mainly important factors in the causation of disease. But by inheritance certain individuals appear to possess a tendency toward this particular disease.

It may occur in persons who have eaten poor quality of food for a long time. This is not surprising, because the symptoms of gout are really due to a disturbance in nutrition.

Modern methods of living, greater understanding of hygiene and food values have contributed to the decline of this ailment. Like other human disabilities, gout is dropping from the casualty list.

In gout there is an excess of uric acid in the blood. The normal output of uric acid by the body is about a gram every day.

This amount is increased or decreased, depending upon the diet. If we eat a diet containing the ingredients which form uric acid, the output is increased. In gouty individuals, the body possesses the inability to get rid of these substances.

In gout the fluids of the body are so overladen with this chemical that they must deposit it somewhere. Usually the joints are selected for this deposit. The first joint of the big toe is most frequently involved. Next come the ankles, knees, and the small joints of the hands and wrists.

The attacks are quite severe and come suddenly, usually in the early morning hours. The individual is aroused from sleep by a severe pain in the joint of the big toe. The joint rapidly swells, becomes hot, hard, and shiny and is extremely sensitive to touch. Fever is present and may be as high as 103 degrees.

As the morning advances, the pain disappears, but the swelling remains. The pain may recur the following night and continue for from five to eight days.

Some persons have three to four attacks in a year; others have more. "Once gouty, always gouty" is a true statement. However, with proper care, the severity and number of attacks may be decreased.

Hygiene, avoidance of alcohol, simple yet nutritious food are essential in the treatment of gout. Outdoor life with moderate exercise, the drinking of a great deal of water are important in warding off future attacks.

What's in Style for Homes

Early American Furniture Type

By AMOS PARRISH

NEW YORK, March 23—Why is Early American furniture fashionable? (It is fashionable, you know. One of the most fashionable of all types of furniture.)

There are several good reasons for it: First, it's our own American style and a part of the traditions of the country. Second, it has a great deal of simple, homelike charm.

Third, it is usable—and is used in practically every room of the home. And fourth, it has so much variety and versatility that it appeals to many different kinds of people.

You find most of it used in fashionable bedrooms. Poster and spool beds, sturdy chests of drawers, convenient highboys. All these pieces have a solidity suggestive of comfort and usefulness.

AN EARLY AMERICAN BEDROOM
Poster bed, chest, highboy and wing chair reproduced in maple

In Informal Rooms

It's fashionable for dinettes and breakfast rooms. Butterfly and drop-leaf tables, ladder back chairs, tavern tables. Useful pieces, all of them.

THE PRACTICAL LOWBOY
can be used in any room

English and Dutch Pieces

When the first settlers came to America they brought with them some of the furniture they'd been using in their Dutch and English homes.

It was 17th Century furniture . . . carved chests, court cupboards and similar heavy pieces of mahogany and walnut. But of course they soon had to begin making their own, of maple and pine.

Quaint Looking

Later settlers brought new furniture with them that gave American cabinet makers new ideas. But still they weren't as expert as the English cabinet men. So even this later furniture was less finished . . . quainter looking.

Modern reproductions of Early American furniture show the same details as the original pieces. Inverted cup legs, flat top highboys, pendant hardware —they were all ideas taken from the furniture of the William and Mary period.

Cabriole legs, splat back chairs, shaped aprons and broken-arch tops all came from the furniture of the Queen Anne period. Early American pie crust tables were copied from Chippendale. And carved front side-boards from Sheraton.

Make-Believe -:- By Faith Baldwin

Adelaide's morning snack of hot milk, toast and jelly, and order was restored.

While Adelaide sipped—"No wonder she's fat," thought Mary Lou, with scorn, "eating all times a day and never taking a step of exercise! I wish I could have her for a year, I'd scare her up on her feet!"—the family made their plans.

Billy Discussed

Billy was to come out to Oakdale a day before his father and mother sailed, as Clara found it unnecessarily cruel to expose him to the emotional strain of a parting on a cold, wind-swept, depressing pier. His diet was discussed, his schooling, his clothing—all this being possible as Billy was out in the garden chasing Aunt Adelaide's excited and indignant cat, with howls of merriment Mary Lou was to follow him down, after closing the house, and to share his little bedroom until she made other plans. When the talk turned, as was natural, upon Howard's new position, and the Orient, Adelaide was in her element, having known several missionaries to foreign parts who had either been murdered in, or partially eaten by cannibals, or who had died lingeringly of awful fevers, including dengue, black water and malaria. There was even one family wiped out with cholera. At this juncture Howard Sanderson wiped his brow, gazed appealingly at his wife and escaped into the garden just in time to rescue the cat from Billy's firm, loving, but unconsciously murderous embrace.

A little later, leaving the sisters together, Mary Lou went out to the kitchen to help Mrs. Jennings "dish up dinner and to set the table. She was quite happy out there in the pleasant smell of roasting and stew and made herself extremely useful. She and Grandma Jennings had always been good friends and Mary Lou thought, wistfully, that, if she could only get some paying work, she would be content to live in Oakdale with the old lady and Billy. But not as content with Adelaide. "Adelaide," thought Mary Lou, in the language of her generation, "gives me a pain in the neck! I'd like to shake some sense into her. She's so darned healthy she's curling up as it."

After dinner—which Adelaide enjoyed heartily, not coming to the table until she had served to an ample tray the Sandersons and Mary Lou stayed for another hour or two, sitting easily in the living room, a hodge-podge of good and bad furniture, of mixed periods, after the dishes were washed and dried. And presently they left for their train, walking to the station for the pain of their health, after so lavish a meal.

Billy, who had been told only that his mother and father had to go away for a time and that he would soon come to stay with Gram, Aunt Adelaide and the cat, was perfectly happy in the charming selfishness of children, too young to realize the impending long separation, and delighted with the thought of country and garden and freedom, to say nothing of the spoiling he would get from his relatives, of which he was perfectly aware. The fact that Mary Lou would be with him, too, made everything quite all right.

Clara was happy for him that he "took it that way," as she said, but nonetheless she naturally could not forbear a little pang of jealousy that her boy seemed so indifferent to her departure.

"Not," she added hastily, "that I want him to grieve."

"He's very little," Mary Lou excused him, "and he doesn't realize. I expect that after you do go, he'll go through some bad times and be awfully homesick for you, Clara." She refrained from adding what she further believed, knowing Billy, which was that he would soon forget, soon adapt himself. Children were like that, she thought, and even some adults. Not all grown-ups, however, possessed such a happy faculty, she pondered heavily.

Easy to Forget

The rest of the remaining time flew, or so it seemed to Mary Lou. The house was cleaned, things were stored, some were sold or given away. Numerously known several missionaries to foreign parts who had either been murdered in, or partially eaten by cannibals, or who had died lingeringly of awful fevers, including dengue, black water and malaria. There was even one family wiped out with cholera. At this juncture Howard Sanderson wiped his brow, gazed appealingly at his wife and escaped into the garden just in time to rescue the cat from Billy's firm, loving, but unconsciously murderous embrace.

Larry Calls

She would spend the night of the Sandersons' departure next door, with a friendly neighbor, for tomorrow morning the last pieces of furniture, the Sanderers and a chair or two, would be gone.

Larry came over that evening, before the Sandersons' return, gazed soberly upon the emptiness, the stripped and packed trunks, the bulging and, but tired boys, gazed earnestly upon Mary Lou's pallor and "declined," as he said, to her extraordinary silence—a remarkable feat—and then dragged her out to dinner, dusty as she was, her trunk and other little belongings having already been expressed to Oakdale.

"You'll scarn so far a'l," she told him over coffee. "I'll miss you."

"Not necessary. Oakdale's only an hour or so away. You can't get rid of me as easily as that." he told her gayly, "and I'm trailing that job for you, Mary Lou. Trust your Uncle Larry!"

"Find me a job as companion," Mary Lou told him, trying to laugh, "you know—genteel and quiet! That's me! I can read aloud, Larry, and I think I can fetch footstools and carry trays and pull down window shades, for I've had a lot of practice of Aunt Adelaide, you know."

Larry had never met that plump and ailing lady, but Mary Lou had given him a full description. He laughed and then sobered abruptly.

"Joking aside," said Larry, "if we can't get you a job like that it would be great."

"Cheer up," ordered Larry, fiercely, "or I'll make you marry me, and then, women, you'll have your hands full!"

She Quit Whoopee in Time

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

When I first came to the city, it seemed fairyland to me. Everyone had a car and there was good time going all the time. I went in for much of the whoopee—but not all, for in my family were all decent women. Then I began to discover you had to be "wild" to be popular with a certain crowd. I get mighty tired of the smell of "bath tub gin" and some common fellow trying to kiss you when he'd had too much. So I dropped the whole gang, feeling I'd rather be an old maid 10 times over than rush around with the gin-and-jazz gang. Lonesome? I should say I was at times; but I stuck it out.

Now I've met a man I never could have, if I had kept on playing with that wild bunch, and we've become engaged. I met him through our office, he is one of the out-of-town associates in the business. I feel awfully sorry I was near-wild, but I thank my lucky stars I pulled out before I went over the precipice. Sometimes I feel that I don't deserve my luck.

HILDA B. M.

Dear Hilda: Congratulations on your good sense in pulling out of the whoopee crowd before it was too late. As you say, it wouldn't have been possible to meet a man like the friend you describe if you continued to go with the "gin-and-jazz" set.

Her Three Fetes

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Three men have played important roles in my life. One I liked very much but, because he drank, my parents objected to my going with him. Another my parents like and want me to go with him, I like him, but the others better. The last but not least is a widower whom I like best of all but, because he has been married, my parents object to my going around with him.

A WORRIED CINDERELLA.

Dear Cinderella: Your parents were wise in their using their influence to forestall your friendship with a man who drank. If you learned to love him, nothing but wretchedness could possibly come from such a marriage. And you were sensible not to accept the attentions of a man your parents favored but to whom you were indifferent. As to this third fete, you are not definite enough—has he a houseful of children? Is he old and cranky? Or has he treated his first wife badly? If he wasn't glad guilty to any of these things, I'd go ahead with a smile on the widower, granted only that legal age and he is capable of taking care of you.

Proper Way to Direct Cards

By MRS. BEECKMAN.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Is it considered all right to typewrite the address on the envelopes of Christmas cards and other greeting cards, or should they be addressed in one's handwriting?

We have had quite a discussion about this.

Christmas cards, since they are social items, such very personal items, should be addressed by hand. As a matter of fact, seeing the handwriting of a friend on the envelope that encloses a greeting card is the first joy we have in opening it. If the envelope address were typewritten we might think we were receiving only an ordinary announcement.

Sure Way To Make Hands Soft and White

A dandy way to make dry, rough, red or work-stained hands soft, supple and white is to rub into the hands, after each washing, a few drops of a mixture of sea moss and glycerin. Sea moss is a noted skin softener and softener, and glycerin a splendid balm. In combination the two make a lotion to be had from any druggist for a few cents. Or you can buy some lotion already prepared at any good drug store. It is called Neptu Lotion and costs only 25c a bottle.

Neptu Lotion makes dry rough or work-stained hands soft and white in a remarkably short time. It makes a protective coating over the skin which prevents chapping, chafing and roughening. Neptu Lotion is safe to use on any part of the body with as great benefit as on the hands. Wherever it is used, it whitens smooths and refreshes. It also relieves and prevents sunburn, chafing, roughness and windburn. It is a fine cleansing, soothing and healing agent and will protect your skin from the withering effects of sun and wind. Neptu Lotion is a naturally good thing for the skin and can do no harm whatever. Contains no grease to clog the pores and catch dirt. Rubs in dry and smooth so you can powder over it. Economical, too, as a little of this unique lotion goes a long way.

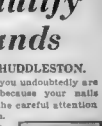
Fine Nails Beautify Hands

By MISS HUDDLESTON.

MANY OF you undoubtedly are discouraged because your nails don't reflect the careful attention you give them.

However, hands which tells the possessor's attentions usually are hands which have been subjected to incorrect care rather than being unresponsive.

Consequently you must inspect your hands to see if the nails like with the shape of your nails, with the type of polish used.



Josephine Huddleston

Before filing the nails consider carefully the contour of the hands from the wrists to the very tips of the fingers. If the fingers are long and the nails regular the nails may extend a little past the ends of the fingers but this should be first decided at the cuticle.

Fingers which are short and stubby require that the nails be permitted to come to the tips of the fingers only. This type nail also should be filed close to the side to give the appearance of tapering fingers.

Fingers of delicate structure, especially when the hands are narrow, permit the nails to be filed almost to a point. This type of finger and hand, however, must not be confused with the small fingers of sturdier build, as this type requires a rounded finish for the nails.

Of course, the nails must be shaped before the hands have been placed in water, for water softens them, making it almost impossible to obtain a correct shaping. When shaping has been completed, the hands should be held in warm, soapy water or warm oil for a very short time. Just long enough to soften the dead cuticle and make the live cuticle more pliable.

Finished with removing the dead cuticle and pushing that which remains back, the smooth-set side of an emery board should be drawn over the edges of the nails to remove any small, rough edges left by the heavier steel file used for shaping.

Nail bleaches also are important as the correct shaping of the nails. When the tip of the nail is allowed to extend beyond the end of the finger, it may be bleached and so made outstandingly white.

Conditions Seen As Ripening for Five-Day Week

Forbes Sees Developments Unfolding to Occupy the New Leisure

By B. C. FORBES

New York, March 23.

"God never sin a mysterious way His wonders to perform."

Is the way being paved for the adoption of shorter working hours, a shorter working week, in this country?

It would seem so.

B. C. Forbes

Consider all that is happening in the way of making life more interesting for individuals and families of moderate means.

First came the telephone, a blessing in a thousand ways.

The opening of the new century brought the automobile. Today there are in the United States enough cars to carry our whole population at one time. No need to stress what it has done to annihilate isolation, to widen social intercourse, to relieve monotony, to enrich life in every strata of humanity.

The movies—reflect how intimately they have entered into family life in this land. The daily average attendance at motion pictures theaters exceeds 7,000,000. More recent the silent screen has adopted the spoken word, thus adding new interest, new thrills, new possibilities to this infant art, industry and entertainment.

The phonograph brings music in myriads of homes, brightening the atmosphere and otherwise enhancing the joy of living.

* * *

The radio!

The imagination of even an Einstein could not grasp all that it means to humanity. It would be scarce be an exaggeration to say that it has brought nearly all that is most interesting in the world into the home into the humblest of homes. Out of the ether by the slightest turn of the wrist, may be drawn entertainment or education, music or oratory, sermons or symposiums, grand opera or pugilism or poetry, sensationalism or sanctity, the words of Pope's royal potentate, crocodile or criticism, art or Amos 'n' Andy

* * *

Now television is on the way. I stepped into a tiny room in the American Telephone Company building in downtown New York and in the twinkling of an eye I saw my wife in a hundred miles away. We talked to each other and saw each other as distinctly as if we had been in the same room. Every gesture, even the movement of an eyelash was plain to me. Television will be and by means to the world cannot be fully visioned. The day is not very far distant when it will be as easy to see distant scenes as it now is to hear distant scenes over the radio. Presumably we will be able to sit at home and watch the most exciting events in any part of the continent—perhaps in any part of the world.

* * *

Does it not begin to appear that these and other developments will make it possible for the great mass of individuals and families in this country to occupy greater leisure interestingly, profitably, thrillingly?

By the time the slowdown or the seven-hour day and the five-day week come into general vogue, may it not be that social conditions will be ready and ripe for the change?

10,000,000 'IN' MAJOR STOCK COMPANIES

By FRANK H. MELOON

Dr. Daniel Starch, consultant in commercial research, writing in the Financial World, produces figures to show the leading corporations of the United States today have about 10,000,000 stockholders. Dr. Starch says that this total is only half the figure commonly supposed but, nevertheless, that it is still an enormous number since it represents one out of every six of the 60,000,000 adults in the country 25 years of age or over.

* * *

When Mr. Coolidge was President, he was quoted as saying there were probably about 22,000,000 holders of securities in the United States. Various other estimates have been made including holders in the smaller corporations, many have set the number around 25,000,000. Dr. Starch thinks this is a substantial overestimation, but that is merely his opinion.

Outstanding news of the past week in stock market circles was the announcement that the New York Stock Exchange, of which Richard Whitney has been left the Bay State's North Shore to ascend to "Big Town" leadership, is president, is planning a $10,000,000 addition.

The annex is planned to relieve congestion on the trading floor, brought Richard Whitney about by increase in membership, and to provide added clerical space. That the work will not be completed for three or four years is less important than the fact that the exchange is clearly looking ahead to great growth in activity.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

Announcement of the abandonment of the policy of the farm board to support wheat prices was a handicap to both the grain and the stock markets today, wheat dropping to a new low price for the year. The market slowed down on falling prices, selling volume dried up and stocks in some sections of the market recovered a good part of their early losses.

Alcohol Is Lower on Dividend Prospects

U. S. Industrial Alcohol today added further to its 10-point decline of last week.

The break reflects the speculative apprehension over the safety of the $4 dividend rate, action upon which directors take at meeting which is scheduled for April 2 by postponement. The 52 bank crisis dates from the first quarter of 1929, replaced the 55 rate which was in force during the period of dividends in 1927 following a lapse from 1922 to 1926, inclusive.

Gardner Higher on Dissolution News

Gardner Motor Co. stock sold higher by a major fraction today, following directors' action in sending letter to stockholders notifying them authorization would be asked at stockholders' meeting in New York on April 7 to abandon manufacture of automobiles and to sell the assets. One of proposals is to distribute approximately 30,000 shares of Detroit Aircraft Corp. stock held by the company on the basis of one share for each ten of Gardner.

Columbia Gas Has Speculative Buying

Columbia Gas has been supported by speculative buying, and showed only a minor fractional decline in most of today's trading This buying has been coming into Columbia Gas from the same interests who were sponsoring movements in other leading issues of the United Corp group during recent weeks. One report has it that the demand has been based on the successful fight of the old group which the company acquired for use in the transportation of natural gas into the territory served by the Public Service Corp. of New Jersey.

Best Absorbing Its Profit-Taking

Best & Co. continued today to absorb its profit taking easily, changing headed in most transactions at only fractional recessions. This stock has had good absorbing which was made in the year-ended January 31, last, and the fact that officials of the company are credited with being optimistic concerning the future. For some time, Best has been one of the favorites of conservative observers among the retail store issues.

National Dairy Is Steadily Bought

A little more profit taking came into National Dairy today. This stock has been steadily bought and supported. It is said to have new market sponsorship. This company shortly will enter its period of greatest seasonal demand, and that normally is a time for favorable market action. Considerable talk has been heard of a resumption of the profitable expansion program by the management, and in that connection a rumor was circulated that the acquisition of Wasatch Dairy Products Co. was under consideration. However, that has been denied by National Dairy officials.

Weirton Steel's Plant Reopened

Favorable news from the steel industry today included announcement that Weirton Steel Co. is opening Steubenville, O., plant today with full operations after three weeks shutdown. Between 900 and 1000 men are employed.

Willys-Overland's Output Increased

Favorable news from the automobile industry today appeared in announcement that Willys-Overland Co. is operating on a five-day week schedule with more than 8600 workers because of increased sales. The daily production scheduls is now 600 cars.

RECESSIONS IN WALL STREET MODERATE

New York, March 23—Break in the grain market caused by announcement of withdrawal of Farm Board attempts to stabilize prices and imminence of more poor dividend actions had only a little effect in Wall St. today.

The list sold off moderately in quiet trading, with few shares depressed more than a point. Bullish activity was mostly at a standstill, but there seems to be no contagion in bearishness of late.

2,000,000 SHARES SOLD

Transfers aggregated only 2,200,000 shares. U. S. Steel, General Motors, General Electric, Sears Roebuck, New York Central, Radio, Anaconda, International Harvester, DuPont and North American lost about ½ to 1½ points.

U. S. Industrial Alcohol was a weak spot, dropping about 5 points to a new low in response to deferment of the dividend meeting and a poor operating statement. Crane and Columbia Carbon lost about 3.

Auburn, on the other hand, was pushed over 7 points to a new peak above 220, and closed up 6¾ net.

BREAD AT WHEAT

The break in wheat on announcement that the farm board would not support the market over the new wheat crop was naturally a depressing influence on finance and markets, but it lacked sufficient element of surprise to prompt any hasty selling of securities.

Most bullish influence in Wall Street at the moment seems to be the widespread feeling that the worst is known. Reduction of New York Central's dividend rate a fortnight ago has been one of the few recent surprises, although the speculative community was fully informed as to the low level of that and other carriers' earnings.

Several important dividend meetings are scheduled for this week. Postponement of the U. S. Industrial Alcohol meeting until April 7 remains here, but in addition dividend meetings are scheduled for Baltimore & Ohio, Westinghouse Electric and Northern Pacific.

GRAINS DROP IN CHICAGO PIT

Chicago, March 23—With traders actively operating on assumptions that to get an adequate export outlet for the 1931 crop, United States wheat prices would have to undercut the Winnipeg market, wheat plunged down here today more than 11 cents a bushel in some cases.

Selling in Chicago quotations went below any wheat quotations of 1895, when July wheat sold at 50½. The bottom-most level ever touched since trading in monthly future delivery contracts was first adopted.

The crash followed announcement by the Farm Board that it would not attempt to support prices by stabilization operations beyond the month of May, when the 1930 crop passes from dealing.

Action of the market was contrary to the expressed opinion of George S. Miller, president of the Grain Stabilization Corp., that the news constituted a bullish factor in the market.

Stocks Are Lower in Curb Dealings

New York, March 23—Strength in a select handful of specialty stocks failed to offset reactionary tendencies in the Curb Market today, and the list as a whole was irregularly lower. Aluminum was again a spectacular performer in the miscellaneous group, soaring 24 points, to a new 1931 high.

U. S. Governments Up in Bond Market

New York, March 23 (AP)—With the exception of issues of the United States government which advanced, the bond market was generally lower today. Trading was dull. Railroad and stock privileges issues were the most active.

Cotton Lower in New York Market

New York, March 23—Cotton futures today closed 37 to 39 points lower. March 10.72, May 10.83-83, July 11.08, Oct. 11.38-39, Dec. 11.87-88, Jan. 11.69. Spot quiet, middling 10.80.

Automatic Voting Profits Increased

FANNING

With GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Raining Pucks ↑ Hockey Galore
Here in Boston | All Around
Next Few Days ↓ Ice Circuit

May Get Boys Out of Trenches by Xmas

HOCKEY'S home stretch—one of the home stretches anyway. They are past the three-quarter post. Only a furlong to go with the Stanley Cup—their skates' and shillelahs' objective and their hearts' desire—looming up on the finish like a seidel of Pilsener—Smack! Smack!—on a mahogany bar. Bruins vs. Les Canadiens! Whoops, My Dear! Strong men stand away from the ropes! Ring for the ambulances and call the cops! Everybody make Whoopee from gran'ma down to the baby!

Outside of the old do-re-mi no hockey mogul yet has satisfactorily explained the weird system of deciding the championship of the hockey universe. But weird or not, the play-off stage of the hockey races is here and we Boston fans are going to be afflicted with all kinds of games in the next few days. It's going to fairly rain pucks. Let's see what is on the hockey menu.

OUT-OF-TOWN cocktail served in Providence, tonight, with a duel between the Boston Cubs and the Rhode Island Reds. Tomorrow night, in Boston Garden, opening duel between the Bruins and Les Canadiens, Shore vs. Morenz, Beatty vs. Mantha—on with the dance! Let joy be unrefined! Don't make it a private scrap, boys. We all want to get in it.

Wednesday night, in the Boston Garden, second game between the Cubs and the Reds. Same ice on Thursday night, second battle between Mieu Morena's Habitants and Art Ross' Grizzlies. Also on Thursday night in Springfield—provided the Boston Cubs are successful against the Reds—will be staged a Cub vs. Springfield shindy. The second Cub-Indian clash is scheduled for the Boston Garden on Saturday night.

There you have it, a whole week of Boston hockey. But that's not all of it. There are more games to come. It would break President Calder's heart if the boys got out of the trenches by Christmas!

Then, while the Bruins and Les Canadiens are having their ice tickerings, there will be other family rows all over the circuit. President Calder is a Scotchman, but there must be an Irish skeleton somewhere in his closet. No one but an Irishman could arrange such a beautiful collection of shindies.

IT SEEMS that after all that these ker-r-o-chial play-offs between e Bruins and the Canadiens are not decisive at-all-at-all. Despite the ct that a team can go through the long league season beating all mers, that counts for nothing, and along about April 1st—an appropriate date for such a foolish system of championship play—some giant down around the bottom of the league can step up and knock the league leaders for a whole row of Chateau Frontenacs.

That's about what happened, last year, if you recollect. After the ubs had knocked the rest of the league all over the lot, winning 38 t of 44 games and hanging up a record that may never again be rolled, along came Les Canadiens, who, in a short series, caught the ubs napkinsum and scary from their season's play, and bumped them ck off the Stanley Cup trail.

Looks as if Percy Calder had the same idea this year. Anyway, you read Bill Grimes' exclusive Boston Evening American story, last riday, you will recall how Calder allowed the plate glass barrier to e put in at the Montreal Forum and gave Les Canadiens and the famous two weeks' practice in playing shots off it. Looks as if there as a Machiavellian skeleton as well as an Irish one in Calder's closet hat plate glass trick had the famous Wooden Horse the Greeks ought into Troy backed off the boards.

But if Les Canadiens, aided and abetted by the plate glass subterfuge, whip our Bruins and win the Stanley Cup, it will upset all precedent and tradition. Go back in the hockey chancelleries and you will find that no Stanley Cup winner has repeated since 'way back around 1924.

THIS CHAP Calder we have been raving about is rather an interesting old cove. The magnates all love him. He's a good business man. In this year of business depression President Calder has seen that hockey business only has fallen off three-fourths of 1 per cent.

With the play-offs and Stanley Cup competitions still to come, it looks as if the poor, downtrodden hockey magnates will wipe that three-fourths of 1 per cent off the books and chalk up a substantial increase on the year's business. Oy! You a bluenose!

So they'll rally around Calder, boys, rally once again, shouting the battle cry, "Maxima!"

CALDER originally was a professor in Abington School in dear old Merry England. He came to Canada from his home in Bristol, England, 34 years ago. First thing you know he was sports editor of the Montreal Herald. Worked into hockey through the sports' editor' chair. Was made a secretary of the old National Hockey Association of Canada in 1914. Three years later he was elected president of the National Hockey League and has sat in the saddle ever since.

The hockey czar has a great head for figures. He carries a little black book which will tell you all about how this year's business so far is only three-fourths of 1 per cent behind last year's. It will show you that the largest crowd and largest receipts were at the Boston-Rangers game in Madison Square Garden, December 23, 1928, and lots of other things. There were 17,491 paid admissions at that Bruin-Ranger game. In Chicago recently the Bruins and the Blackhawks played to 17,051.

We told you Calder was a Scotchman. Regarding the weird system of hockey play-offs, Calder sprung a Scotch joke.

"Admittedly, the extra cash resulting from play-offs," he grins, "is not a point in pay-off distance."

Bring 'Em Back Alive

By Frank Buck with Edward Anthony — Chapter 21 — Pictures by Hal Coffman

With Leopard Leaping for Kill, Maternal Instinct Triumphs

Frank Buck tells today in his thrilling story of the jungles, "Bring 'Em Back Alive," the tale of a monkey mother whose maternal instinct was stronger than her fear of death.

Each chapter of this thrilling narrative—one of which is printed in the Boston Evening American every day—is a story in itself, complete and interesting.

CHAPTER XXI

I had some orders for crocodiles. Not being fond of these reptiles—a vicious lot at best, with none of the color and imaginative appeal one frequently finds in savage creatures—I had put off securing these specimens until I had gathered most of the other items of a big collection that I had rounded up at Singapore and Calcutta for shipment to zoological gardens, dealers and circuses in the United States.

I was in Cochin when I decided to land my crocodiles and get this dull chore out of the way, little knowing that these stupid reptiles were going to provide an opportunity to witness as touching an example of one maternal instinct as its heroic best as I have ever seen—in a species that had no thing to do with my mission.

I left, with Lal for the Sunderbunds, that vast lowland studded with innumerable islands and marshes where the Ganges splits into many rivers and enters the Bay of Bengal. This district is easily accessible from Calcutta and was the ideal place to go for my crocodiles.

Until recently the Sunderbunds were one of the game paradises of Asia. Most of the big game has been killed off, although there are still some tigers and leopards. Thousands of monkeys still inhabit this territory, however, and it is also alive with crocodiles, cobras and wild pigs.

HOW REPTILES ARE CAUGHT

The Sunderbunds cover an area of over 1900 square miles. Some of this is heavy jungle, but in the main it is not the thick black jungle of other parts of India and the Malay country.

There are several light-houses in this district. An old shikari who used to get crocodiles and other specimens for me lived with one of the light-house keepers and I was on my way to see him, having notified him of my needs and arranged for a meeting place.

Zoos are the only market for crocodiles. Hardy creatures, they live a long time and practically every sizable zoo has at least one specimen to round out its reptile exhibit.

The natives have many ways

FRANCE-U. S. IN NET CLASH

New York, March 23—Having made a clean sweep of the indoor tennis championships last week the invading French forces are out to capture their international team match against American net stars in a tourney which begins today. Jean Borotra, the Bounding Basque who captured the national indoor title for the fourth time; Christian Boussus, who paired with him in winning the doubles title, and young Pierre Landry carry the tricolor in a three-day team competition along the lines of the Davis Cup matches.

Worcester Gets Open Golf Play

June 8-10, open championship, Worcester Country Club, Worcester; July 14-18 amateur championship, Winchester Country Club, Winchester; July 23-Aug. 1, junior championship, Sandy Burr Country Club, Wayland; Aug. 15, public championship, The Country Club Brookline; Oct. 2-3, Lesli cup matches, Charles River Country Club, Newton Center.

Worcester May Get Olympic Tryouts

New York, March 23 (AP)—The National Regatta of the Association of Amateur Oarsmen has been awarded to Long Beach, Long Island, provisional on Long Beach meeting the requirements for holding the event. The dates are July 24 and 25.

The dates for the Olympic tryouts next summer have been set as July 5th and 8th, with the site yet to be selected.

Five sites are being considered—the Long Beach Lagoon, Lake Carnegie at Princeton, N. J.; Lake Quinsigamond, Worcester, Mass.; the Lincoln Park Lagoon in Chicago, and the Schuylkill River at Philadelphia.

Did You Hear That

Points are scored against college boxers whose friends yell encouragement or advice to their heroes in the ring; all the boys need to do is cheer lustily for their friend's opponent to bring about a victory for their own warrior—there are four football pitchers left in the big leagues—Quinn of Brooklyn, Mitchell of the Giants, Grimes of the Cardinals and Faber of the White Sox—1,000,000 people watched the 82nd annual Oxford—Cambridge boat race, which was won by Cambridge; Cambridge has won 42 of the 82 races, Oxford copped in 40 of the heats, while on one memorable occasion the two boats finished in a dead heat, after a four-mile row—"Uncle Jim" Arthur has made large sums of money in horse racing, either in owning horses or betting; he trains likely youngsters to be jockeys and then sells them to owners of rich race stables; his ability to pick the right type for the task and train them correctly has reaped him as much as $3,000 on the sale of a single rider — Clarence DeMar is in great condition, and right now many Marathon fans pick him to win again in the annual April 19 Marathon from Hopkinton to Boston — Leo Lermond says he wants to run a couple of Marathons after the coming Olympics, just so that he may have had the experience of competing in the long grinds—and capable physicians state that Marathons, if contestants train over a long period, are less harmful than short distance races in which rapid acceleration strains the heart.

88 TEAMS ENTER COURT TOURNEY

Eighty-eight teams are already entered in the annual amateur basketball tournament of the Boys Club of Boston.

The games will be played in the Eben D. Jordon Memorial Gymnasium at the rate of 15 contests each evening.

Teams may enter by writing to the Physical Director, Boys' Club of Boston, 15 Green st., Charlestown, giving the name of team the line-up and correct weight of the players, together with the manager's name and address.

Nashua Six in N.Y. Tilt Tonight

New York, March 23 (AP)—Three games in the quarter final round are on the schedule for the National A. A. U. hockey championships today.

In the afternoon game the West Point Hockey Club of Nashua, N. H., meets the Penn A. C. of Philadelphia. Tonight, the Syracuse Hockey Club plays the Crescent A. C. of New York and the Adirondack Olympians, an all-star aggregation, plays the New York A. C.

The Atlantic City Sea Gulls also are in the semi-final round by virtue of a 4-1 triumph over the Boston Hockey Club at Atlantic City Saturday.

West Point won its way into the quarter finals by beating the St. Nicholas Club of New York, 2 to 1. The Penn A. C. defeated the Hancock, Mich., Eagles 6 to 2.

The upstate New York teams trounced two New Jersey entries yesterday. Adirondacks beating the North Jersey Country Club of Paterson 9 to 2 and Syracuse beating the Paterson Town Team 9 to 0.

Amateur Bouts at Quincy Tonight

The first boxing show to be staged in a Massachusetts Armory since a ring game was legalized in this state will take place at the Quincy Armory tonight.

The committee in charge of tonight's show reports that a large number of entries have been received.

FORDHAM COURT 'PRO' CHARGES ARE PROBED

New York, March 23 (AP)—Jack Coffey graduate manager of athletics at Fordham University, today said he was investigating the charge, made in the New York Daily News today, that the five regular members of the Fordham basketball team had competed with professionals in a game at Bridgeport, Ct., March 8.

Coffey said that if the charges were proven the men would be automatically suspended from further athletic competition.

"It is a clear violation of the rules, regardless as to whether they were paid or not paid," Coffey said.

The News said that a story in the Bridgeport Post of March 9th listed the "Fordham Flashes" as being scheduled to play the Laurel A. A. a professional team that night.

The lineup listed Steve P. Wisniewski, star football and basketball player; Marion Zeleski, captain of the 1928-29 team; Bobby Hurley, and Mulhern and F. Joy, all Fordham regulars.

Columbia Stars Deny Pro Charges

Although no charges have been made against either, Captain-elect Bender of the Columbia basketball team, and Capt. Gregory of this season's five, issued statements today denying that they had ever competed professionally. Both are outstanding stars of the Eastern Intercollegiate League.

BRUINS IN FINE FORM FOR PLAY-OFF SERIES

LOCALS MEET CANADIENS TOMORROW

By BILL GRIMES

For the fifth consecutive year, the Bruins have qualified for the National Hockey Club playoff championships and will make their opening bid for the world's title tomorrow night against Les Canadiens at the Boston Garden.

Two ago, which marked the introduction of the present system of determining the championships, the Bruins cleaned up the Flying Frenchmen in straight games, in what was known as series A, and wound up their drive for the Stanley cup by defeating the Rangers in two games. Last spring the Bruins fell before Les Canadiens in the final round and the cup went back to Canada.

For years the Bruins and Canadiens have been the outstanding N. H. L. clubs. Over a period of seven seasons the Frenchmen have scored only four more goals than the Bruins, and as these figures include the 1924-25 season, during which the Rosemen norrsied only 13 points, the American champions have a 20-point edge over their greatest rivals since Boston has been represented by a team worthy of being called a major league club.

Series Should Be Best in History

With the greatest clubs in the history of hockey competing, the coming Bruins-Canadiens series should be the greatest thriller in the annals of the National Hockey League.

Both clubs are in prime condition for the test. Although they have had their share of injuries, fortunately no serious accidents occurred which would cause either club to enter the championships in a weakened condition.

Offensively, the Bruins and Les Canadiens are stronger than a year ago. The acquisition of Red Beattie, Hal Darragh and Peaches Lyon has given the Bruins a superior scoring punch to the 1929-30 team.

Canadiens Stronger Than Last Year

Like the Bruins, Les Canadiens have a stronger attack than the one which carried them through to the Stanley Cup last year. For many seasons the bulk of the offense fell on the shoulders of Howie Morenz and Aurel Joliat and it was due to the superhuman efforts and rare ability of these stars that the Flying Frenchmen have met with such uncanny success.

For years, Les Canadiens were unable to unearth a right winger in whom Morenz and Joliat had sufficient confidence to team with. Last fall, Sprague Cleghorn put the O.K. on Johnnie Gagnon and the diminutive Frenchman was taken up by Manager Cecil Hart. Gagnon was assigned to the Morenz line and he has lived up to expectations. In fact, he is one of the leading scorers of the Canadian division.

From a defensive viewpoint, the Bruins do not appear to be as vulnerable as they were last year. Capt. Lionel Hitchman has not been himself all season, although George Owen has developed noticeably, is not up to the standard set by Hitchman during the Maroon and Les Canadiens series last spring.

Much Depends on Playing of Hitchman

Les Canadiens will stake their all on the defense which stopped the Bruins last year, Marty Burke, Sylvio Mantha and George Hainsworth, with Howie Morenz and Pete Lepine do the heaviest back checking.

Morenz has the speed and the fighting heart to back check any entire forward line, while Lepine is regarded as the most efficient defensive center in the professional ranks.

While the Bruins and Les Canadiens are settling the main issue at the Garden tomorrow night and Thursday, the other four qualifiers will be playing home and home total goals to count series.

Toronto and Chicago open up in Toronto tomorrow night, while the Maroons, who have been in attendance since their Saturday night game with the Bruins, will be the guests of the Rangers in New York. The scene of the runners up series will shift to Chicago and Montreal for the second and final encounters and then the winners will meet in a best two out of three series for the honor challenging the survivors of the Bruins-Canadiens tussle.

BRUIN CUBS IN FIRST TEST

The Bruins Cubs are in prime condition for their first big test in the Canadian-American League play-offs tonight in the Providence Auditorium when they play the Reds in the first of a two game series, total goals scored determining the winner.

The return game will be played at the Boston Garden Wednesday night.

Should the Cubs qualify for the Fontaine Cup final they will open a three-in-five-game series with the Indians in Springfield on Friday. Other dates contingent upon a Boston victory over Providence are Saturday night at the Garden, Springfield one week from tonight; Boston Garden April 1, and Springfield April 4.

JIM LONDOS AT GARDEN FRIDAY

RED SOX START HOME SOON

Pensacola, Fla., March 23—After month of intensive training, the ted Sox will break camp here Wednesday morning and travel to dobile, Ala., for games with the Louisville Colonels and Mobile.

Then the club will start its barnstorming tour, playing exhibition games that will lead it to Fenway Park in time for a pair of preseason tilts with the Braves.

"I am positive that we will give Boston fans a real winning baseball team in the Red Sox this season. We have a good, strong club and, more than anything else, the boys are all working together. I am quite sure that the fans will notice the change in the club," said Collins.

"I will not attempt to station the players in the various positions until I have a good look at them in real action on our exhibition trip northward.

"We have sent many of the rookies out to minor leagues on option," Collins continued, "and I only intend to carry Eddie O'Neil and Justin McLaughlin, a couple of promising recruit pitchers, back to Boston with us."

Bob Smith One of Cubs' Winners Now

Oakland, Cal., March 23 (AP)—Cub pitchers, who were used up at the rate of four and five a game toward the end of last season, have made a turn-about-face.

In four games with their great National League rivals the Pittsburgh Pirates, the Cubs used exactly four pitchers and each won his game, they were Charlie Root, Bob Smith, Guy Bush and Sheriff Blake.

Loughran, Griffiths Battle

New York, March 23 (AP)—One big hurdle stands between Tommy Loughran and a second shot at Jack Sharkey and the ringwise Philadelphian will try to clear it this week

Tommy battles Gerald Ambrose Griffiths, Sioux City, Ia., heavyweight, in a 10-round bout in the Chicago Auditorium Friday night.

$100,000 WIN FOR OLD RACER

Agua Caliente, Mex., March 23 (INS)—From a selling plater to the winner of the Agua Caliente Handicap, the world's richest horse race, was the story of Mike Hall, the old campaigner, today as his owner, Robert M. Eastman of Chicago banked the tidy sum of $100,000 by virtue of his horse's victory over a classy field of ten thoroughbreds.

None of the favorites finished in the money. Sun Beau, who went to the post at the extremely short odds of 2 to 5, finished fifth, behind the Choctaw, Plucky Play and Alexander Pantagan, in the order named.

In stepping the mile and a quarter in 2:03, Mike Hall established a new track record. The winner paid $20.80, $6 and $4.20 across the boards in the machines.

English Flat Race Season in Swing

Lincoln, Eng., March 23 (AP)—The English flat racing season opened here today with the first important state event of the season the Lincolnshire Handicap at one mile, down for decision on Wednesday.

Thirty seven horses are listed as provisional starters with Lady Ludlow's four-year-old Massai a lukewarm favorite at 100 to nine against. The handicap was first run in 1853.

Goodfellow Trails Morenz in Scoring

Detroit, March 23 (INS)—Ebbie Goodfellow scored Detroit's lone tally as the Falcons fell before the Chicago Black Hawks here, 2 to 1, but he was the loser today in the race for high score hockey honors for the season He finished just one point behind Howie Morenz of Les Canadiens.

CHANCES OF A'S UNCERTAIN

By JOE CASHMAN

Ft. Myers, Fla., March 23—The Philadelphia Athletics, hosts to the Braves here, today are prohibitive favorites in the pre-season betting to win their third straight American League championship this year.

We wouldn't wager against the A's neither would we back them to any extent to repeat their triumphs of '29 and '30. Their chances are too uncertain right now.

As we look at it if "Big Five," who are Grove, Earnshaw, Simmons, Cochrane and Foxx, move as good as ever and escape injury, the A's should breeze along to another title.

On the other hand, should just one of the quintet have a poor season, the Macks would need a lot of luck to win again, and should two of them flop, the champs would never be in the running.

It isn't a great team as a whole. Rather, it is a team of five superstars, everyone of whom must continue to be as good as ever, if the championship is to remain in Philadelphia.

There are other fair performers on the club, it is true, but they are far from champions without the "Big Five."

Earnshaw and Simmons Are Still Absent

This is very evident in the A's camp at this writing. Earnshaw and Simmons are still at Hot Springs getting into shape and without these two important cogs, the Macks don't look like even a first division club.

The two absentees will be present and ready to go when the race starts according to Manager Mack, but rumor says otherwise.

Reports from Hot Springs have it that Earnshaw is suffering from a stomach ailment which has cost him 20 pounds and the close of last season and that Simmons, who is still unsigned, is having both contract and leg trouble.

Mack has a large squad which numbers several very promising youngsters working out here, but he states that the veterans are still good enough to play for him.

All depends on the "Big Five." If they come through, all will be well. If any of them falter, all will be lost.

New Panama Hat for Connie Mack

Fort Myers, Fla., March 23 (AP)—Connie Mack is the proud owner of a brand new panama hat at public ieremony sponsored here this afternoon by the city of Fort Myers as a token of its "affection for the manager of the Philadelphia Athletics.

The manifestation services will be conducted prior to an exhibition game between the Athletics and the Boston Braves. Mayor Josiah H. Fitch will present the hat at the home plate just before the game starts.

Thomas A. Edison and his wife and Barron G. Collier, South Florida developer, have indicated they would attend the ceremony and game.

The Athletics will leave tomorrow for the North after completing their seventh training season in Fort Myers.

MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

"Did you see Jake Zeramby breeze against Ted Abella at the Garden the other night?" shot back Lacy.

"Yeah," replied Mr. Boston, "He sure did breeze."

"The kid has found himself again," went on Lacy. "He is today one of the great light weights of the country. If he gets the chance he will punch holes in Tony Canzoneri.

Mr. Boston.

"Most fans don't know that Jake is only 21 years old. He was up in the money when only 19.

"Two years ago Zeramby was a sensation. Then he ran into a series of mishaps. His trouble was due to poor hands and making weight.

"Jake busted his dukes in bouts with Sammy Fuller and Andy Callahan, but kept right on fighting. He finally took a layoff and had his hands fixed up. Dr. Martin H. Spellman, famous bone specialist, opened up Jake's left hand and removed a piece of loose bone.

"Zeramby also unwisely made low weight several times. He was a growing youngster and was fighting nature. It was necessary for him to take off weight following the weighing in for his second bout with Fuller.

"Since Zeramby staged his come back, he has won four fights in a row. He has outboxed better with each start. The Zeramby who licked Abella would have upset any lightweight in the business.

"I have brought Jake along carefully during his come back. He's now ready to shout for the big fellows. He is a cinch he will lick any of them."

New Interest in Local Ring Stars

"I find new interest in our New England boxers," asserted Mr. Boston. "Sammy Fuller's win over Tony Canzoneri, Andy Callahan's defeat of Bat Battalino and Jake Zeramby's victory over Lud Abella have stirred up things in the dear old fistic racket hereabouts.

"Then there is Ernie Schaaf who has won five starts since December. Ernie will wheel into action again on Thursday night when he will collide with Leo Fantasio in Minneapolis. It will be the second time these worthies have treaded blows. When they met in Chicago a couple of years ago, the decision was a draw.

"Jere Gardner tells me Jim Maloney will resume training after a rest and that he will then be prepared to tackle any of the headliners in the heavyweight division.

SOUTHBORO STAR DOWNS MRS. SHEDDEN

Mrs. J. Dallas Corbiere of Southboro, seeded third in the women's national lawn tennis championship tournament at the Longwood Covered Courts, today swept to an easy win in her first match, defeating Mrs. W. Martindale Shedden of Boston, 6—2, 6—2.

Mrs. Corbiere had little trouble in vanquishing her first round opponent. The third seeded player in the tourney had too fine a command of her shots for her foe.

All the other victors in the early matches went through to easy victories today. Louise Packer of Winchester had a 6—0, 6—2 win over Mrs. Edward J. Nash of Boston; Marion Wood of Brookline conquered Dorrance Chase of Boston, 6—2, 6—2. In the other match Nancy Hallowell of Chestnut Hill defeated Mrs. Robert Morris of Boston, while losing only two games of each set.

Mary Whittemore in Near-Upset

Mary Whittemore of Boston, southpaw player hits a ball as hard as most men players, was involved in a ner upset. After winning the first set of her match with Elizabeth Bright of Cambridge, she lost control of the ball and had to battle all the way to win the second set and match, 7—5.

Mrs. Charles J. Hubbard, Jr., of Cambridge, put a Washington girl out of the tourney when she won over Marion King in straight sets, 6—0, 6—1. Marjorie Sachs of Cambridge conquered Virginia Cross of rovidence, 8—2, 6—1, and Mrs. Benjamin E. Cole, 2d, of North Andover downed Mary Cutter of Winchester, 6—1, 6—2, in other matches.

TENNIS RESULTS

Mrs. J. Dallas Corbiere, Southboro, defeated Mrs. W. M. Shedden, Boston, 6—2, 6—2.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
"Golf's Greatest Teacher"

You think, no doubt, that the golf club is necessarily lifted upward as you swing it back. For every reason that you have for lifting it upward, find two devices to keep yourself from lifting it. The golf club is not lifted up so much as it is moved back to it. Shove it back and shove it out and away from you and it will elevate itself. It does so that because there is nothing else that it can do. It is the turning of your body, the shoving around to the right of your left shoulder, that causes the club to go up—this, plus holding your head still.

Harvard Gridmen Report Today

BERT SEAVER

DICK FOLSOM

Doughboys, gobs, leathernecks, from all over the East will take off their coats and swing man-sized polthogues in the Army, Navy and Coast Guard boxing championships of New England in the Boston Garden, tonight. Here you see BERT SEAVER, a heavyweight from Plymouth, and DICK FOLSOM, a lightweight from Boston, putting up their dukes. Handling their dukes is a part of the training Uncle Sam now gives all of his fighting men.

CASEY BEGINS CAREER AS HEAD COACH

A new era in Harvard's football history begins out on Soldiers Field today when Eddie Casey assumes the togs as varsity coach and greets a squad of Crimson athletes for a three-week period of spring practice.

Fifty or 60 good candidates are expected to report.

Three of the Crimson's leaders probably will not be on hand. For Harvard has heard much about over-emphasis and is doing its best to curb any tendency in this direction by making the spring football practice noncompulsory.

In fact, many talented athletes in other spring sports out to report for football. Thus Capt. Barry Wood, Charley Stevens and Eddie Mays, all first-string backs, will not be present for the opening hours of the varsity baseball squad.

But there will be a good many of next year's varsity squad in the spring practice turnout and Eddie intends to start immediately in the scrapping of the Warner system and the installation of his own—that is the Warner style as used by Notre Dame, Army and Holy Cross.

MAT CHAMP TO TRAIN HERE

Ed George, world's heavyweight wrestling champion, arrived in Boston today to commence training for his finish bout, best two falls out of three, with Nick Lutze of Southern California, which is scheduled at the Arena a week from Thursday night.

George will engage in several minor bouts around the New England circuit this week as part of his training up to his meeting with Lutze. Ed will not engage in any matches after Friday until he enters the ring with Lutze.

Paul Bowser has revealed that it was necessary for him to guarantee Lutze $6,000 and to give him a 35 per cent privilege in order to get him to enter a ring with Lutze. The latter will do his training here and is confident he will be victorious on account of his meeting with George.

'Bard of Nantasket' Scores Hole-in-One

Charles M. Smart, the Bard of Nantasket, connected with his first hole-in-one, while playing in a foursome with Frank Coleman, Fred Barker and Bill Ayling, yesterday, at the South Shore Country Club.

Although Smart is a veteran golfer, one, in fact, who never misses an opportunity to play the royal and ancient game, he had never before enjoyed the thrills of a hole-in-one until his 7 from came through for him yesterday.

Court Tennis Title Tourney Tomorrow

With a field of 14, bill but three of whom have been Boston or New York, the United States court tennis singles championships get under way at the Tennis and Racquet Club on Boylston st. tomorrow morning.

Local athletes predominate, with F. P. Frazier, the runner up last year to Lord Abadare, who is not defending his title, heading a list of six players from the Tennis and Racquet Club. Robert Bacon, a Harvard student, from Newport, who has recently taken up the court game and is better known for his play in junior tennis tournaments, has signed in from the B. A. A.

New Ball Causes Higher Handicap

New York, March 23 (USI)—Five thousand golfers are to be handicapped from one to five strokes by the Metropolitan Golf Association under the direction of Jess Sweetser.

The raising of the limit from 25 to 30 strokes has been deemed expedient since the introduction of the lighter and larger ball but to grant the request of players of lowly rating for handicap cards.

Local Matmen in N. E. Title Tourney

The annual New England A. A. U. amateur wrestling championships at the Boston Arena, Thursday night, are attracting some of the best college mat men in the game.

Some of the popular young giants entered are Bob Rubin of the Boston Y. M. H. A.; Charley Ware of the Town & Y. Otto Berchenoll of the Boston Y. M. C. U.; and Leo Kerner of the Newton Y. M. C. A.

MYSTERIOUS WAYE

What Has Gone Before

John Waye is a thorn in the flesh to Dr. Charters. Threatening exposure of the doctor's criminal past, the stranger has forced admittance to his nursing home and obtained an alibi for the murder of "Spider" Schlitz. Charters wonders if Waye knows that he robbed Schlitz and Chink Dorson of their shares of the St. Clair diamond haul. To impress the other patients Waye pretends harmless insanity, his startled "Rosemary!" being in character, when he meets Marjorie Lauderdell, steadily growing worse under treatment at the home. Her aunt, Mrs. Lauderdell, was formerly an associate of Charters' evil days in America. Dr. Charters rejects Dr. MacAdoo's advice to "bump Waye off," realizing Waye's foresight in letting his personal physician know of his whereabouts. He decides, however, to use Waye's pretended delusions as a means of getting him certified as insane and removed to an asylum.

Now Read On:

CHAPTER 6
Double-Crossing

Hurrying along the dark corridor that led from the hall to Dr. MacAdoo's consulting-room, John Waye, encountering the latter gentleman, either accidentally or intentionally, stumbled against him.

"I beg your pardon, my dear Doctor," he said in Portuguese.

"La vao os pes onde quer o coracao." ("The feet go where the heart wants them to), growled Dr. MacAdoo in reply.

"Oho! We Scots speak Portuguese, do we?" smiled John Waye. "Now I wonder whether Portuguese is really your native tongue — because we were born and bred and educated in Rio Janeiro, and Portuguese is Bahia and Santos until we came a very nasty cropper, eh?"

"You're a very clever fellow, aren't you?" he said, turning the key in the lock of the door.

Knows Santos

"And you know Santos, do you?" smiled Dr. MacAdoo, as he lighted a cigarette.

"I don't know Santos really well. But I know one or two of the original Santos-coffee fiends, and Manoel Machado. Also something of its history and of Manoel's, too."

Dr. Emmanuel MacAdoo's mouth fell open, and himself fell silent.

"Yes, I know why Manoel Machado became an expert in coffee, and how he contrived to get himself upon the list of imports of the United States of America. I even know how Manoel Machado then became an export of the said United States of America. And why it's quite unlikely that he will ever be re-imported."

Dr. MacAdoo's smile evaporated.

"You even know the future, eh?" demanded Dr. MacAdoo. "And you don't know Santos? But you do know Chicago?"

"He'll, my dear Manoel? I don't remember saying so."

"Look here, what's the game?" blustered Dr. MacAdoo. "If it's blackmail, you're wasting your time on me, apart from the fact that I am a Scotsman, and a most apotlessly blameless life. You can't get blood out of a stone."

In Dry Well

"It would be to look for water in a dry well, as we say in Brazil, eh, Mr. Scotsman?" jeered John Waye. "Only a person as mad as I am would do that, what?"

"Quite so," agreed Dr. MacAdoo, and took heart of grace, "but you couldn't do it better than by talking to Sir Bernard. But if you go up to Sir Bernard and say, 'I'm mad,' he'll merely turn to Dr. Charters and say, 'I don't know what this fellow's game is, but he's malignin'. See?"

"Now that's very kind of you, Manoel. But why are you so anxious that I should succeed in persuading Sir Bernard that I am mad?"

"Well, I thought that was the great idea in view of probable unpleasantness consequent upon your recent activities at Withey End."

Dr. MacAdoo, with an eloquent shrug and an outward motion of the hands, rarely employed by Scotsmen, waived the question.

"I have a kind heart," he said, "and wish to be helpful."

"Well, well, Manoel," he said, "one good turn deserves another. I'll give you a piece of useful advice now. I advise you to buy a long spoon."

"Yes, a very long one, for you're certainly supping with the Devil—and his name is Charters, at the moment. And you'll shortly want a friend, indeed, Manoel."

"A friend?"

"Yes, for you'll be in the very gravest need."

"Now that's very kind of you, Waye. But why are you so very anxious on my account?"

"To quote yourself, I have a kind heart, and wish to be helpful." John Waye assured him.

"Now you think over what I have said," he added, "and grasp the fact that Charters is double-crossing you. Has he told you what I really went to Witherby End for? What I went there to get? Has he told you about Chink Dorson, Spider Schlitz, and himself and the colossal fortune? Has he told you who 'Mr. James' is? Has he let you in on everything? What does he pay you? Why, man, you ought to be making thousands. And pretty soon, too. The game's nearly up. And another thing. Do you know what he's going to make out of the Marjorie Lauderdell business? What share is he giving you for that job, by the way?"

Not a Cop

"Sst!" hissed Dr. MacAdoo, springing to his feet. "Sst! What do you mean by 'What's he going to make out of the Marjorie Lauderdell business'?"

"Just what I say. And I asked what he is giving you for doing it? And, I might add—what are you giving her?"

Dr. MacAdoo sat down again limply.

"Who are you?" he whispered. "A dick?"

"Would you turn King's evidence, if I were?" asked John Waye.

Dr. MacAdoo's face was a study, in its mingled and changing expressions of bewilderment, shrewdness, fear, hope, and, finally, relief.

"No. You aren't a cop. You killed Spider Schlitz," he said, "and got in here and announced it before it was discovered. What do you mean about Marjorie Lauderdell? Look here. Let's put our cards on the table. You tell me who you are, and all you know, and what you're after. And I'll come across."

"On your word of honor?"

NEVADA IS LAND OF FARO AND SIX WEEKS' DIVORCE

By WINIFRED BLACK,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

San Francisco, March 23—Well, well, well! Did you read about Nevada in the news of the day?

My, my, times will be lively in Nevada from now on.

Make your reservations early if you want a seat in the pullmans on your way to Reno, Carson City, Elko, Carlin or anywhere else in the wild, free Sagebrush State, where men are men and jack rabbits are—whatever you call 'em when you fry 'em.

I wonder if the suicide list will keep up with the Suicide Club of the Riviera?

QUICK SERVICE SURE

You don't have to stay there three months to get a divorce—not any more.

This bill just passed by the Nevada Legislature provides that if you want a divorce because your husband is late for dinner every once in so often, and won't even apologize for it, with the biscuits burned to a crisp—all you have to do is to buy a ticket to Nevada.

Not necessarily to Reno. Why should any town have the monopoly on any trade?

Think of the brisk business they do in wedding rings in Reno right now! The jewelers and even the drug store people, some of them, specialize in wedding rings. You see them in windows all over town, and I never can help wondering whether they'll let you trade in your old wedding ring for part payment on a new one.

Why not?

What's a wedding ring, anyway, but just so much gold or platinum or so many diamonds, or whatever you happen to choose?

MEANS BIG BOOM

Only six weeks residence in the State—in Reno, within sight of the courthouse, or out in the sagebrush with the rabbits and the prairie dogs—and the thing is done.

Isn't it grand?

Why should anybody bother with a wife and children, or a husband with a cradle full of youngsters, when it's all so easy as that?

Marry John today, and Tom in three months, and Dick in six months more. What is it they used to say in the theaters?

To be sure, the unreasonable persons who deal with juvenile crime insist on telling us that nine-tenths of the wayward boys and girls come from homes where girls come from homes broken by divorce.

We should worry about wayward boys and incorrigible girls

Why spend more than six weeks thinking about them, anyhow?

Six weeks—that's a little long, isn't it?

Why not make it six days, gentlemen of the Nevada Legislature, or six hours?

Or even make it would be best to have it six minutes.

Think of the glad crowds that would surge from the trains singing merrily, "Where Is My Wife Life" or "One Bright Summer Morning I Pursued My Way" if you had to stay in Nevada only long enough to get your liberty and start off again, in a new pursuit of happiness.

Why, I'll bet the Legislature of the Legislature of Nevada—do.

Bring 'Em Back Alive

By Frank Buck With Edward Anthony

of catching crocodiles, but the one most commonly used is to take a live monkey and tie a stout hard wood stick about the same length as the monkey along its back. The stick is sharpened at both ends. Attached to the center of this stick and set crosswise upon it is another of about half its length. The monkey is then tied out on a leash in the mangrove bushes that grow in the shallow water along the edge of the streams where these creatures are found. When the crocodile grabs the monkey, whichever way it takes its prey, either sidewise or perpendicularly, it has to clamp down on the two sharp ends of the stick, which holds its mouth open. Being unable to close its mouth, the crocodile cannot swim, so it immediately makes for the banks where its tracks can easily be followed by the trappers who have no difficulty in catching the monster on land.

CAUSE LITTLE TROUBLE

As little enthusiasm as I have for crocodiles, I am always glad to pick up any one that wants it. It is all in the day's work, and usually it is part of an order that includes more interesting assignments.

I'll say this for crocodiles: once you get 'em boxed for shipment they cause very little trouble. I recall one that I brought back for the St. Louis Zoo that declined food and drink for 45 days and yet had the good grace to be in perfect condition when I delivered him. I mention this by way of giving a hint to those hardy these strange reptiles are.

Another specimen that I brought back had declined interest in food for almost as long a period but in this case the long fast was more understandable, for on its return had consumed a native woman before he had been caught. The victim had gone to the river bank to do the family washing when the reptile dealt her a terrific blow with its tail that felled her. Then the killer dragged her off into the mud and finished the job.

Crocodiles are among the worst of the man-eaters. In some sections the local governmentr pay a reward for the killing of these vicious reptiles. For instance, in Sarawak, North Borneo, which is ruled by Rajah Brooks, the only white rajah, a bounty of twenty-five cents (Straits money) per foot is paid for all crocodiles killed as captured and for man-eaters a larger bounty is paid. The depredations of these murderous creatures have reached sizable proportions in that district and for some time past everything possible to stamp them out has been done.

INDIES EXAMINED

Most of the specimens brought in by those claiming bounty money range from ten to fourteen feet. (The biggest crocodile I ever saw was a sixteen-footer that got into a drain ditch on a rubber estate in Johore and was killed by coolies.)

A native claiming bounty money usually goes through this routine: First, of course, he catches his crocodile. (Experts tell me that is the most important step and I guess they're right.) Next is the question of transporting the captive aliess. The reptile's front legs are trussed up over its back and tied, then the hind legs are treated in a similar manner. The prisoner is then lashed to a pole and two men carry it on their shoulders to the nearest village where it is taken before the headman, the local police magistrate or anyone else in authority.

In the presence of the Authorities One the reptile is cut open and then his insides are explored for signs of a human feast. Practically all the natives wear trinkets of some kind, usually pewter, brass or silver bangles. The first object of the search is to look for the bangles which a greedy crocodile does not hesitate to scrap down his throat along with the flesh. These ornaments become imbedded in the reptile's insides and apparently do him no harm. I know of one case where a crocodile that was caught and killed was found to have bangles so deeply imbedded in his flesh (which has completely grown over the trinkets) that it was the opinion of the headman that these ornaments represented a killing made 20 or 25 years ago.

If signs are found indicating that the captured reptile has been feasting on human flesh, the special "man-eating bounty" is paid. It not the smaller reward applies.

LEOPARD IN PURSUIT

Lal and I travelled by bullock cart the last seven or eight miles of our journey to meet the shikari, there being no other means of conveyance. If I could have expected something better crocodiles on my arrival I would have found the trip more enjoyable. As it was, I was bored by the necessity of retravelling this familiar ground which did not promise to yield anything in the way of a new experience. My one thought was to meet my man, get my crocodiles and return to Calcutta with all possible haste. I couldn't have been less interested in my mission if I were on my way to collect a herd of cows—although that's an unfair comparison. I find cows more interesting than crocodiles.

As we rumbled along I found myself mentally cussing out the driver for not making better time, although I knew full well that he was doing all that could be expected of him. Suddenly as we passed a spot where there was a small clearing on one side of the jungle, the driver let out an excited yell in his best exclamatory Hindustani. As he did I heard crashing sounds near the side of the road.

Then I saw a monkey jump frantically from a gnarly, twisted tree trunk that leaned out over the roadway and scramble across the trail some 10 or 12 yards ahead of us. Obviously the frightened creature was making for the trees on the other side of the clearing. When the monkey was halfway across the road I could see what was happening. There was a yellow streak in pursuit . . . a leopard! The pursuer had no doubt damned up the sloping tree after the little thieves, and, having failed to make its capture there, was now after the elusive simian on open ground. The unlucky monkey had barely reached the other side of the road when the big cat, coming on in a great rush, pounced upon it. There was an agonized screech and in a fraction of a second the monkey population was reduced by one.

FINDS BABY MONKEY

Just before the leopard seized the shrieking monkey and disappeared with it into the jungle on the other side I thought I saw a small, dark object drop to the ground a few feet away. I had no idea what I had seen—in fact, I wasn't sure I had seen anything—but my curiosity was aroused. I halted the driver and with Lal went over to investigate.

Lal wasn't sure what I was looking for—which wasn't surprising since I wasn't either. He had kept his eyes on the leopard.

For several minutes I looked around on the ground, my search yielding nothing. I was about to give up the hunt and decide that I had been imagining things when I suddenly spied something in the grass, a baby monkey not more than four inches long. I picked it up and examined it. It couldn't have been more than a few days old. Its head was about as big as a good-sized marble, its face and hands were pink and its very thin hair was a further indication that it had only recently arrived on earth.

I wrapped the little baby in a handkerchief and placed it in one of the pockets of my jacket. Then we were off again.

What had happened was obvious. With the breath of the leopard on its back, the last thought of the doomed mother was to throw her babe to safety. This she had done.

A monkey mother carries its babe in a peculiar way. The infant, facing the parental stomach, puts its little arms, as far as they'll go, around the body from which it sprang, and hangs on for dear life in this fashion. The mother moves from place to place, on the watch for food and looking after its own concerns, knowing that its babe will instinctively cling to her. When the herding of the episode I have just described realized that she was faced by certain death, she tore the young one loose and threw it to a place on the grass where she hoped it would be safe. I hadn't any doubt that this is what had happened.

THRIVES AS PET.

At the nearest point along the line, I stopped and got some goat's milk, which I fed with difficulty to the little child of my favorite jungle heroine.

I met my shikari and picked up my crocodiles, but they received scant attention from me. I assigned Lal the job of looking after them. My little monkey was my primary concern.

When I returned to Calcutta I found it easier to feed the little infant, for there I was able to secure an eye-dropper, a device to which I have frequently resorted as a means of getting milk into the stomachs of tiny animals. The little fellow thrived and I made a pet of him all the way back to America, and for some time afterward. I didn't like to part with him as he had grown very fond of the tiny cups—as amusing a handful of rhesus monkey as I'd encountered in some time—but eventually it became inconvenient for me to keep him.

His best chance of surviving was to put him in a place where there were attendants to look after his needs. So I gave him to the San Diego Zoo, where I knew he would have excellent care. On only a few occasions have I parted with an animal more regretfully.

Hoover Orders Navy Ships to Visit Australia

Washington, March 23 (US)—President Hoover today ordered the battleship fleet to visit Australia during the summer.

The fleet will leave San Pedro, Cal., April 7 and will arrive in Sydney, Australia, May 14. It will remain there until May 25.

Port of Boston News

By JAMES J. DELANEY

Summer shipments started to arrive in the Port of Boston yesterday from foreign ports.

EMBASSY LIQUOR

The Japanese Embassy at Washington will get a choice liquor supply which arrived here on the United States Shipping Board steamer Golden Arrow, came here from Manchester and Liverpool with a large cargo of palm oil. Five cases of red wine, 20 cases of white wine, 13 cases of champagne, 21 cases of brandy and six cases of vermouth will be delivered at the embassy under a heavy guard of customs and secret service men. While the ship is in this port, the supply will be carefully guarded.

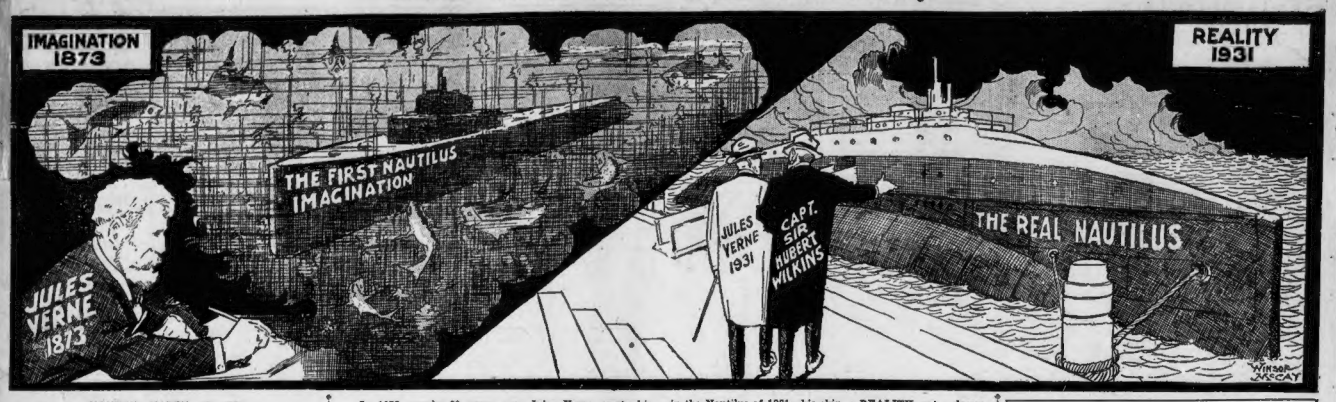
First the Dream---Then the Reality



In 1873, nearly 60 years ago, Jules Verne wrote his story, "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea." He imagined a boat that could go under water, taking passengers to the tropics or the North Pole.

Thousands of American boys read the story and thousands of American fathers explained that it was interesting, but, of course, it couldn't really happen.

* * *

* * *

Thus we learn to respect and value dreamers, knowing that they are pioneers of the world of reality and accomplishment.

* * *

Those that dream today of a world free from poverty, war, vice and selfishness may not live to see it, but their dream will come true. "It hath not yet been shown what we shall be,"

Uphold Living Standards

The American system of government and business is menaced distinctly less by Communist agitators than by misguided bankers who have been urging a deliberate letdown in the American standard of living.

The Hearst newspapers have long felt that it was a business necessity, as well as a wise social policy, for American industry to encourage an improving average standard of living.

We find support of this viewpoint by a notable outside economic authority, Dean Wallace Brett Donham, of the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration. In a challenging forthcoming book entitled "Business Adrift," Dean Donham thoughtfully concludes:

"AS SCIENCE AND MANAGEMENT PROGRESS, STANDARDS OF LIVING FOR MANY MILLIONS MUST GO UP STEADILY OR CAPITALISM IS DOOMED, AND SECURITY FOR CAPITAL CANNOT LONG EXIST APART FROM AN EQUITABLE DIVISION WITH LABOR OR APART FROM SECURITY FOR LABOR."

That is a clear and distinct warning from an able scholar to small-minded men in high places.

The way out of the depression is clouded by the fallacious thinking of economic reactionaries, who think they see in the present economic maladjustment an opportunity to deflate labor.

The major task of business management today is to remove the blockades which prevent a superabundance of available goods from flowing through trade channels to consumers.

Lack of confidence in the future, and fear of wage cuts and unemployment have resulted in timid, subnormal consumer buying.

President Hoover takes the view that the time has come for normal buying policies.

Industrial and banking leaders can contribute to the breaking down of trade barriers by espousing constructive policies and repudiating false doctrines.

A vast domestic market of 125,000,000 souls is ripe to be cultivated anew, and only timidity, a spirit of defeatism, and fallacious doctrines delay the far-reaching business recovery which will flower as soon as consumers recognize that the business future assures economic security to competent and energetic workers.

The depression has been the heavy price that business in the large has paid for improving machinery but NEGLECTING THE HUMAN FACTOR IN TRADE.

In the future, human welfare and business prosperity must advance arm in arm.

A Reserved Seat

Mr. Raskob seems to think that the Power Issue can be settled at some other time or by some political force other than the Democratic Party.

And certain Republican gentlemen claim to believe that there is no Power Trust, no Power Issue.

But the Power Issue WILL BE ONE OF THE LEADING SUBJECTS discussed in the 1932 campaign.

All intelligent Progressives know that the Power Trust, through the Holding Company device, EXPLOITS THE PUBLIC and EVADES INVESTIGATION.

Our Police College

"Prexy" Hultman's Latest

"Prexy" Hultman is going to send every member of the police department to college. From rookie to captain, everybody is to take a six-months course in modern police methods.

Boston's police college will at once take first rank in the world. There is nothing exactly like it anywhere. The best ideas have been collected and studied from each of the cities where similar plans have been put into practice. From this collection of ideas, Boston's course will be made up.

The faculty will include not only experts in every line of police work, running all the way from Blackstone to ballistics and target practice; from lectures by famous detectives to addresses by preachers and social workers.

Officers will learn the law as well as crook-catching. They will be taught to use their own brains in emergencies. They will learn the virtues of patience and courtesy.

The police officer of today occupies a far different position in the community than he did years ago, when cities were smaller and the problems of congested communities were not so many and so varied. A good policeman today must combine the qualities of a learned judge, a kindly guide and counsellor, a trained athlete, and an overseer of the welfare of his district.

Commissioner Hultman's new college will help these men to help themselves, and by so doing the efficiency of the department cannot but be lifted another notch, to the great benefit of the entire community.

Mr. Hultman has accomplished a great deal during his comparatively short regime. None of his activities, however, holds forth greater possibilities than this latest plan.

New York Day by Day -:- A Modern Pepys -:- By O. O. McIntyre

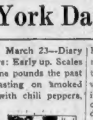
NEW YORK, March 23.—Diary of a Modern Pepys: Early up. Scales show I gained nine pounds the past year and so feasting on smoked sausage, spiced with chili peppers, from Major Dickson in Houston and Ciara Bell Walsh and Adele Rowland dropped in a moment.



So at my stint and abroad with my wife, stopping to say farewell to Watterson Rothacker, off for Sumatra, Java and Borneo. Then putting in at Vincent Lopez's apartment and he played an African lament on the piano which had a barbaric tom-tom bass as savage as ever I heard.

In the evening to a benefit and saw performers such as Roy Atwell, De Wolf Hopper, Donald Brian and Lina Abarbanell whom I had not seen in years. Then seeing Sax Rohmer, the British novelist, and home where I read his latest thriller, "Daughter of Fu Manchu," until very late.

* * *

Ted Cook, the humorist, is on the last lap of a six months experiment in living in one of the old houses in the Greenwich Village section. He is still cutting his hair, has not fallen for a smock and remains devoted to his wife. He finds the Village pleasant, but when visitors call he insists upon showing them pictures of his home, his children and his collection of sheep dogs in California.

* * *

Cook's western home is like a castle hanging on a Pyr crag far back in a Beverly Hills canyon, the workshop looking down upon many of the surrounding estates of movie notables. His study is a glass enclosed structure built around a python-limbed oak.

* * *

Most of New York's new de luxe hotels have difficulty getting under way. Often they bounce around in fussily feathered futility for a year or so. Several months after the now successful Biltmore opened a despairing manager went to the roof-top and leaped to his death.

Similarly the Ambassador on Park avenue struggled through many weeks of emptiness before it turned the corner into a steady patronage. The famous Holland House went through a similar period of travail as did the old Fifth Avenue.

* * *

Harry Carey, star of that grand picture "Trader Horn," was a boyhood schoolmate of Mayor Walker. Carey, whose father was a Tammany politician, is a native New Yorker who went completely "western." A tank town trouper for years, he stranded in California and remained there. He is an experienced ranchman and like good old W. S. Hart, another New Yorker, is not only an expert horseman but has a pronounced cowboy drawl.

Almost overnight the theatrical map in West 42d street is tinged with a Fourteenth street vulgarity. Two burlesque shows are being presented at the Liberty and the Republic—once Thespic temples for notable legitimate stars. There are pawky nosed comics with green whiskers, splay feet and baggy pantaloons along with gold toothed blondes in tights and sour sopranos in wide velvet hats. The slap sticks whang and seltzer bottles squirt. And hardly is the Flea Circus now in its seventh year of its astonishing run in the Rialto's heart.

* * *

Earl Carroll in full evening dress suggests a mortician. He is tall, lean, hollow-eyed and cadaverous. At a party the other night Heywood Broun lugubriously greeted him with: "The body is on the second floor, to the right."

Listen, World!—Don't Know

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Smart Ones Watch and Wonder

SOMEONE writes—"Why do you so often say, 'I don't know'? You're supposed to know. If you don't, your boss had better hire someone who does."

Maybe so, stranger. And if my Boss starts looking, he'll doubtless find many who feel better equipped to write this column than I . . . for People Who Know Everything are the commonest thing there is in any market. And yet—here are certain large advantages in not knowing and being willing to admit it—

Elsie Robinson

Not that I was always this way. Like most youngsters, I started with the idea that I had the inside dope on all creation. Were you puzzled by God . . . bewildered by Life . . . confused about your neighbor . . . uncertain about yourself? Ask me! I had an answer for everything!

From which you might think that I was sitting pretty and having a grand time. As a matter of fact, I was anything but!

For the more I knew, or thought I knew, the more miserable I felt. Instead of widening life into an alluring adventure, my "knowledge" made it seem a biological blunder. Instead of glorifying and illuminating man, my reasoning made a bum of him.

All of which was very discouraging. What was the use of taking a chance with life when it was such a fizzle, or with man when he was such a flop? So I reasoned. And the more I reasoned, the sicker I got. Until gradually it began to dawn on me that Knowledge wasn't such a treat after all. THAT I MIGHT EVEN HAVE MORE FUN IF I DIDN'T KNOW SO MUCH!

Well, things couldn't be any worse—that was sure. The experiment was worth trying . . . in sudden exasperation I stood up, faced the whole show and said—"I DON'T KNOW."

And suddenly, amazingly, everything changed!

At those magic words, all the tight explanations and stingy solutions which I had tied on people and things dropped away . . . dropped away like dingy sheaths . . . and Life emerged in its vast, unreasonable beauty, in its infinite variety and mystery.

And I saw that you couldn't define or explain Life—that Life went on and on, beyond all interruptions and confusions and mistakes.

And I saw that you couldn't define or explain Man—that he, too, went on and on, beyond the feeble and furious things of his body, beyond the foolish mishaps of experience . . . on and on, into unexpected beauty and bravery—

Even the dullest Life, even the weakest Man, went on like that. You never could tell—

No, you never could tell about God or Life or Man or Yourself. But it didn't matter. Everything went right along, even if you couldn't explain it. You went right along, too—seeing visions you couldn't understand, hearing harvests you couldn't analyze. And Life was much more exciting, and Man much more lovable, and God, somehow, nearer, if you didn't try to know it all. You even got on better with Yourself.

Why do I say—"I don't know"? That's why. Because I have discovered that no one can know BUT THESE SMART ONES WATCH AND WONDER.

Wife Who Draws Big Pay

By WINIFRED BLACK

'And Reminds Her Husband of It

DOES a woman's pay check buy her husband's self-respect? And throw it out of the window?

I don't know what I think.

Winifred Black

You can't buy love, or friendship, or loyalty, or trust, or youth, or beauty, or brains, or a light heart and a willing mind in the market place.

There are lots of people who would be glad to buy them if you had them to sell, but what would they do when they got them?

And what would you do, kind sir, and fair lady, without them? . . . you who were born to your own heritage that nothing on earth can take away from you.

Which would you rather have, a voice like Caruso's, a brain like Einstein's, a personality like Mussolini's or a bank account like one of the Vanderbilts?

No, I'm all wrong to say "what's a man worth" when we really mean how much money has he got.

He may be worth a whole lot to the world, to his friends, to his family and to himself—and not have a nickel to his name.

But, nevertheless, notwithstanding, be that as it may, it ought not to make a woman feel "smarty" to make more money than her husband, but just the same it does make her feel smarty, and no man can be happy with a "smarty" wife.

They've been trained, into getting used to it, ever since the first caveman lugged home his first deer on his shoulders and the first cave woman caught her breath and whispered, "Aren't you wonderful?".

Perhaps the day will come when men will get the "aren't you wonderful" technique—and like it.

Change, development, expansion these things are doubtless for the good of the race, but, dear, me, how painful the growing pains do seem to be.

The human race is changing very fast, these days, but somehow I do not believe the male and female of that race have changed enough to permit the wife to be the wage earner, in comfort and pride, and keep her husband in the "aren't you wonderful" state of mind.
